THAW ACCUSES JEROME OF INDICTMENT TRICK

FORMER BOSTON GIRL GETS $25,000 BREACH OF PROMISE VERDICT

Mrs. Cora Baldwin Clark, formerly of Boston, who won big heart balm verdict in suit against John Leon Martin in New York.

Mrs. Cora Baldwin Clark, formerly a Boston girl, and whose mother still lives here, has secured a $25,000 breach of promise verdict against John Leon Martin in the New York courts. It is one of the largest breach of promise verdicts on record.

Justice Page of the New York Supreme Court rendered the verdict. Martin admitted that he had once asked Mrs. Clark to marry him, and had been accepted. But he said:

"We quarrelled after that, and though eventually our acquaintance was renewed we never renewed the engagement."

Martin is the son of the late millionaire, John F. Martin. Mrs. Clark and her mother were in court when the verdict was announced and both smiled with delight. "Quite a verdict," was the mother's comment.

Max Steuer was Martin's attorney. In his argument he declared that Martin was "only a baby" in Mrs. Clark's hands. He said she first got him into the engagement, then broke up the truth when she learned the elder Martin would not give his son any money. When the elder Martin died she renewed the acquaintance.

CAMPAIGN ENDS; ALL CONFIDENT

With a rainy election day predicted and clouds threatening to start a downpour at any minute, the four candidates today whirled to the finish of their campaigns in a blaze of red fire and oratory.

Two of the four candidates, Bird and Walsh, will close their campaigns with a series of rallies in Boston. Mr. Gardner's last speech will be in French, to the French-speaking residents of Marlboro. Mr. Foss will speak on the Cape, finishing at Wareham just before supper.

With their campaigns ending, all four men are confident—for publication at least. Here is what they have to say.

WALSH—"My big plurality will surprise everybody."

GARDNER—"I expect to win handsomely."

BIRD—"I am confident."

FOSS—"A landslide is going to elect me."

But outside of the candidates themselves, most predictions are "Walsh." Straw votes taken by the AMERICAN and other Boston papers indicated a victory for Walsh, with Bird showing improvement over last year, and running second. Political prophets were unanimous — in private conversation — for Walsh, and the only real fight was believed to lie between Bird and Gardner.

Walsh will have some thirty rallies in Boston tonight—Bird about half as many—and the other candidates will speak half a dozen times apiece.

Urges Ministers to Preach Eugenics

A committee of Boston ministers met today in Pilgrim Hall to discuss eugenics. Rev. C. Thurston Chase of Lynn, who performs eugenic marriages only, addressed the gathering and urged upon all ministers the necessity of bringing the question of eugenics before their congregations.

Mitchel 4-1 Choice in New York Betting

Thirty Rallies Close Campaign Tonight; Sulzer Confident.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The majority campaign will have a whirlwind finish tonight. More than thirty meetings are scheduled before the Fusion and Democratic spellbinders cease their work. This is the first time the fight has ever been carried on so energetically up to the last minute.

The betting today showed John Purroy Mitchel, Fusion candidate, established as a 4 to 1 favorite over Judge Edward E. McCall, the Democratic standard bearer. That is the first time in the history of New York that odds on a majority election have reached that figure.

It is estimated that $250,000 has been bet on the election. Only during the early days of the campaign were the wagers made at even money. Since William Sulzer and his investigator, John A. Hennessy, projected themselves into the situation Mitchel odds have steadily gained confidence.

Fine Autoist $30 for Failure to Stop

G. Herbert Brazier, a consulting engineer, of Boston and Newton paid a fine of $30 today in the Newton Police Court for his failure to stop his automobile when told to do so by a police officer. Brazier, on October 27, in his machine, struck and badly damaged a United States mail wagon.

Harvard Register Would Sell Goods

The Harvard Register has about six hundred dollars' worth of merchandise which it is anxious to unload to Harvard students to the extent of a 10 per cent. discount. Last year the Register printed advertisements paid for in merchandise. Now it is up to the Register to sell this stuff.

Quincy Man Charges Wife Deserted Him

Edgar H. Field filed suit for divorce in the Dedham Superior Court today against his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Field, accusing her of desertion. The couple were married June 25, 1902, and lived in Quincy. The husband says his wife deserted him last January. He asks the custody of their three children.

MEXICO PLANS TO RESIST

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 3.—The Mexican government expects United States troops to invade this country within a few weeks and is making plans for a defence of the capital.

Hasty efforts are being made to increase the revenues, and all troops that can be withdrawn from isolated regions are being brought here.

Among the well-informed there is no doubt that the United States government will have to intervene in Mexico to drive General Huerta from power. He is seeking a large foreign loan, and Foreign Minister Mehrno declared that all indications pointed to success in the negotiations. Money is needed to pay the soldiers being gathered here.

The army is Huerta's one hope. The government is meeting constant disaster in its military operations. Jerez, an important town in Zacatecas, has been captured by the rebels in a battle in which more than 1,000 men fell, according to dispatch received early today.

Five thousand constitutionalists are marching on the city of Zacatecas, which is defended by only 3,000 federals.

In Zacatecas are hundreds of refugees from Presnillo, which the rebels occupied when the federals retreated. The aim of the rebels is apparently to capture all the cities outside of the federal district, and then concentrate for an attack on the capital.

An important cabinet meeting will be held this afternoon. General Huerta will take up election matters with his advisers.

CRUISER TACOMA MOVES IN CLOSER TO VERA CRUZ

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 3.—The United States cruiser Tacoma took up a commanding position in the harbor today and Mexican officials are wildly excited as a result.

The Tacoma now lies two hundred feet from the wharf. An explanation of the warship's action has been demanded by the port officials. Previously the Tacoma has lain outside the harbor. On her way in today her propeller was fouled by a submerged cable near the entrance to the harbor. When the cable was cleared away the vessel swung around in front of the Mexican cruiser Vera Cruz and took up position between that vessel and the shore.

Argue on Labor Contempt Jan. 1

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—On the request of Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and John Mitchell, the Supreme Court of the United States today set January 1 as the date for hearing argument in the labor contempt cases.

500,000 Men Ready For Service in U. S. "War Plans"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The "war plans" of the Army Ordnance Department are completed, and for the first time in the history of the country the United States is in readiness at a moment's notice to arm and equip 500,000 men to send into the field in the event of war. These plans have been worked out by Lieutenant-Colonel J. T. Thompson of the Ordnance Department, under the direction of Brigadier-General William Crozier, chief of the bureau. Colonel Thompson pointed out that his "war plan" is based upon conditions as they would actually exist in the event of hostilities. The line of the regular army would be increased to its maximum enlisted strength as provided for by law; the entire organized militia of the country would be mustered into the service of the United States at full war strength, and the remainder would be raised by the enlistment of volunteers.

OLNEY APPEALS TO PETERS TO GIVE UP RACE

Former Secretary of State Richard Olney today lit the gas jet beneath the ingenuity pot by asking Congressman Andrew J. Peters to withdraw from the fight in favor of President Thomas J. Kenny of the City Council. The pot immediately began to boil at a great rate —with these prompt developments:

Peters refused to withdraw and said: "Wednesday morning, I shall take out papers as a candidate."

John R. Murphy of Charlestown like-wise announced:

"I will take out papers on Wednesday."

The advisory committee of the Citizen's Municipal League held a long session at which they were expected to look favorably at Mr. Kenny.

And Mayor Fitzgerald said:

"If I wanted to be Mayor again I wouldn't ask a better stage setting. All I would have to do would be to walk into the office."

"Will you take the walk?" asked the reporters.

"Oh, let the Municipal League go ahead," replied the Mayor. "If I get in to the fight I can show them in half an hour, a non-partisan business men's organization that will sweep them and their like out of business."

Bank Has New Rules for Harvard Men

The Cambridge Savings Bank, which is the only savings bank in the Square at Harvard, has posted its regulations as to dealing with Harvard students. No Harvard man will be permitted to draw money on a deposit until ten days after it has been made, and that money may not be drawn by the bank so desires, until after ten days' notice.

Aged Man Asphyxiated.

HAVERHILL, Nov. 3.—James A. Fuller, eighty-three, was found dead of gas poisoning here today. It is believed he turned on the gas by mistake.

Servian Ex-Premier Dead.

BELGRADE, Nov. 3.—Ex-Premier Gruitch of Servia died today.

THAW COUNSEL MAKE NEW BATTLE TO FREE NEW YORK FUGITIVE

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 3.—Counsel for Harry K. Thaw made the last and supreme effort today to win the freedom of their client by filing with Governor Felker their brief, which sets forth the legal reasons why Thaw should not be extradited to New York. Thaw accuses Jerome of winning the New York county indictment by a trick.

Thaw bases his fight for liberty on the four following contentions:

CONTENTIONS BY THAW COUNSEL.

First. That the indictment submitted with the requisition does not charge a crime.

Second. That the requisition is not in accordance with the rules of legal practice adopted by the Governors of various states for extradition.

Third. That the laws of New York have been violated in obtaining the indictment against him which charges conspiracy to escape from Matteawan.

Fourth. That the requisition is not made in good faith.

Arsenic is allowed until Thursday to file its answer to the brief of the Thaw attorneys. Governor Felker has promised to make an immediate decision.

If the warrant for extradition is issued by Governor Felker, the case will go automatically to the United States District Court, to which Thaw has secured a writ of habeas corpus.

Find Jerome's Name.

The new brief specially charges that the indictment was secured by the testimony of Jerome. It is shown in the brief that the list of witnesses who testified in New York County is identically the same as

Girl Died Natural Death in Machine

Auto Mystery Cleared by Medical Report.

The death of Miss Margaret Louise Tolland, the Back Bay saleslady, who dropped dead in the automobile of H. H. Craig, a Boston furrier, was due to natural causes, according to the report today of the medical investigation. This cleared a mystery which was caused by the secrecy of the investigating officials and their refusal to reveal the identity of Craig.

Miss Tolland died in the machine as she was driving through Brookline. Craig was at the wheel. She was the daughter of James Tolland of Charlestown. She has two brothers in Boston and lived at No. 844 Beacon street.

Craig lives on Cambridge street, Brighton.

U. S. Upholds Bay State 'Excise Law'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The United States Supreme Court today upheld the "Excise Law" of Massachusetts, which taxes the capital stock of corporations located in other States, but which are engaged in other than interstate commerce in the Bay State. Test cases had been instituted by the Battle Creek Packing and Making Co. and the S. S. White Dental Company of Pennsylvania.

The attack upon the Massachusetts law was based upon the contention that the tax was an unlawful burden on interstate commerce and took property without due process of law.

Plaza Cat Dines on $3 Gold Fish

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The daily dispensation of gold fish from the marble and bronze fountain at the Plaza Hotel was explained yesterday when a watchman found a maltese cat fishing with his paws in the tank. The gold fish, fifty in all, were put in the fountain a month ago, cost $3 each.

CALLS ON STRIKERS TO SURRENDER ARMS.

Big London Fire Set by Militants

Historic Haddon Hall to Be Closed as Result of Their Threats.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—One of the most serious fires which have resulted from the threat of the militant suffragettes to destroy all the railway stations in England occurred at Streatham Hill today. Debris, which fell upon the tracks, held up traffic. Nearby buildings were threatened. The damage is estimated at $20,000.

Owing to threatened suffragette outrages, the Duke of Rutland decided today to close Haddon Hall, in Derbyshire, one of the most historic of English mansions.

"L" Conductor, Laid Off, Kills Himself

Because he was laid off as a conductor of the "L," after a service of thirty-seven years, and on account of the recent death of his wife, Dennis F. Dody, fifty-one, of No. 1 Dahlgren street, Dorchester, committed suicide. He was found dead today in his room with the gas turned on.

THAW COUNSEL FILE BRIEFS WITH FELKER

the list which appeared in Dutchess County with the exception that Jerome testified at New York. Assuming that the evidence of all witnesses remained unchanged, the Thaw lawyers ask: Why did the New York County Grand Jury vote to indict Thaw on the evidence that the Dutchess County Grand Jury found to be insufficient? Did the evidence submitted by the prosecuting attorney turn the tide against Thaw? On this point the brief states:

The brief further reads:

"He appeared as a witness before the Grand Jury which found this indictment and that, we allege, is probably the reason why the indictment was returned 'a true bill,' because a former Grand Jury in Dutchess County had not returned an indictment charging the same offense against Thaw 'a true bill.' Evidently if the special Deputy Attorney General had appeared before that Grand Jury they would have found a true bill and the fact that the New York County Grand Jury did find a true bill, with the special Deputy Attorney General as a witness, and the Dutchess County Grand Jury did not when he was not a witness, would indicate pretty strongly the reason why the two Grand Juries differed. The same witnesses that appeared before the Grand Jury in Dutchess County appeared before the Grand Jury in New York County, and it is presumed their testimony was the same, as both indictments charge the same offence.

"What the special Deputy Attorney-General swore to before the Grand Jury we do not know and have no means of knowing. It is not claimed that he had anything to do with the conspiracy to escape, but if he made the same inflamed and extravagant statements before the New York Grand Jury that he made before your Excellency, it is presumptive that they had much to do with the finding of an indictment.

Fails to Charge Crime.

Perhaps the most important feature in the brief from a legal standpoint is the charge a crime.

"Thaw was acquitted of homicide on the ground of insanity. He was committed to Matteawan under an order of Justice Dowling. He sued out three writs of habeas corpus to effect his release from Matteawan on the ground that he was sane, but all three attempts were defeated. The present requisition is accompanied by an affidavit from Dr. Raymond F. C. Keib, which shows that Thaw was held as an insane man until the day he escaped."

Dr. Kieb is also attacked for his statement that he seeks to punish Thaw. The lawyers claim that this is unbecoming for a keeper of an insane asylum to desire to punish a man who is held by the court to be insane and who cannot according to law be guilty of the commission of an act that would demand punishment.

TWO MORE GIVE UP TO POLICE IN CONSPIRACY CASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Two more of the men indicted with Harry K. Thaw for conspiracy in connection with Thaw's escape from Matteawan, surrendered themselves today. They are Eugene Duffy and Michael O'Keefe. They were admitted to $3,000 bail.

When Duffy and O'Keefe surrendered William T. Jerome was in court. Owen Bohan, their counsel, asked that they be paroled in his custody until bail could be arranged. Jerome objected.

Expert Against Beiles a Failure

Father Pransaitis' Testimony in Ritual Case Falls Flat.

KIEF, Russia, Nov. 3.—The Rev. Father Pransaitis, a theologian and one of the hostile expert witnesses against Mendel Beilis, defendant in the "Ritual murder" trial, declared on the stand today that he was sure the truth about ritual ceremonies could never be known.

He further declared that parts of the Talmud bore out this contentions against the Jews, but he was unable to quote any extracts to support his declarations, and his testimony fell flat.

Counsel for the defendant said that the testimony of Father Pransaitis was to be considered about as seriously as the things said upon the vaudeville stage.

'L' Road Wins Point Before Arbiters

Nine-in-Eleven-Hour Law Must Be Considered.

The Elevated Railroad Company won a victory at the arbitration proceedings today when the arbiters filed a decision to receive evidence on the effect the nine-in-eleven-hour law will have on the company's pay roll.

The board has power to fix wages, but not hours, where blue-uniformed men are concerned. The men asked the board to disregard the possibility that the eleven in nine-hour law would go into effect. The road said the arbiters must consider this, as the eleven in nine-hour law would cost the road $1,000,000.

The law becomes operative if the men demand it, and Fred Fay, union organizer, told the board the men will demand it.

The decision, which was a document of ten pages, concludes with this paragraph:

"The board rules that either party may introduce evidence of the hours of labor, of the blue uniformed men, under the present schedules, and also under the provisions of the 9-in-11-hour law of 1913; of the relation between the hours of labor and the wages, and of the increased cost of operation of the road which would result from an enforcement of the 9-in-11-hour law."

Car Strike Riots in Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 3.—Rioting broke out in the street car strike before noon today, when the police and strike-breakers attempted to push an abandoned car off of Illinois street to clear the track. The car had collided with and demolished a transfer wagon. Showers of sticks and stones from the tops of buildings followed and the attempt to clear the tracks was abandoned. An inspector was seriously injured by a bottle thrown from a saloon. Several arrests were made.

"Harvard Dames" in Appeal to Students

The latest appeal to Harvard students is made by the "Harvard Dames," a club of women who are relatives of Harvard boys, and who meet at intervals in the Harvard Phillips Brooks House. They have posted a notice asking the Harvard men to bring around women members of their families to the meeting of the "Harvard Dames," and thus build up a ladies' auxiliary to Harvard.

Patient Leaps to Death From Window

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—John Gray of Springfield, Mass., a patient in Gouverneur Hospital, leaped today from the fourth floor to the street. His skull was fractured and he will die.

WALKER GIRL NOW HIDDEN IN SANITARIUM

Dr. Samuel W. Ellsworth of Quincy, family physician to Miss Elizabeth Walker, the wealthy Brookline girl who was found in New York after a four-days' disappearance, today said that Miss Walker's whereabouts would be kept secret, in the hope that she can be nursed back to health. He said she is like a "little child who has wandered away from its home, and doesn't know where it went, nor why."

Miss Walker is in a Greater Boston sanitarium, and every effort will be made to restore her to health. Meanwhile the family is attempting to find her pet kitten, "Beaver," which she took away with her, but which has not returned.

Dr. Ellsworth today said:

"We are fully appreciative of the help given us by the AMERICAN, and all other Boston newspapers. Without their help, she might never have been found. But, it is thought best not to make public her whereabouts at present. The excitement might be her undoing.

"Miss Walker today is safe in a nearby sanitarium, where she is receiving the best of care. But she is so mentally disturbed that her condition resembles that of a little child who has wandered away from its home, and doesn't know where it went, or why. She is in excellent physical condition, but is irrational.

"She doesn't seem to know how she reached New York. It is fortunate that she did not meet with any mishap during her wanderings. The fact that she had stayed at the Belmont when in New York with her father on several occasions no doubt accounts for her going there after leaving home.

"The newspapers' splendid response to Mr. Walker's appeal for help shows that the press can be relied to act in an emergency."

Baptists Not Gay, Says Dr. DeBlois

Rev. Dr. A. K. DeBlois, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Commonwealth avenue, told the ministers of that denomination today in Chipman Hall that the Baptists were recruited from the rank and file of the people. "They are not guilty of any social standing among the gay and fashionable," said Dr. DeBlois. "Their blood is the best blood of the nation, but it is not found among those who are carried with the new fangled notions in fashions."

Kenney in Strong Fight in Ward 21

One of the hottest fights for the House of Representatives is being staged in Ward 21, where James T. Kenney is making a "come back" fight for the Democratic vote in a Republican ward. Kenney was in the House in 1911, and his labor record, labor men say, is one of the best on record. His platform, says Kenney, is: "The Democratic platform from top to bottom."

Who Is the Real Typical American Girl?

Perhaps You Know Her!
Send in Her Photograph!
Rare Present for the Winner,

A LETTER recently received by the Boston AMERICAN contained this question:

"Has any committee of competent judges ever selected the typical American girl?

"I am familiar with the types as drawn by Charles Dana Gibson, Harrison Fisher, James Montgomery Flagg, Howard Chandler Christie and some others, but none ever really satisfied me as being really typical.

I read in a New York paper that Owen Johnson, the author, declares that the American girl of today is a rebel. Mr. Johnson explained, however, that he regarded her more of a mental than a physical type.

I have traveled all over the world and I feel that I am safe in saying that from all essential points—beauty of face, of figure, of grace, of vivacity, of companionship, of general attractiveness—our American girls surpass all others.

"Still, I have never yet seen, either in flesh or pictured, the girl of whom I would say: 'There is the real, typical American girl.'

"Can you find her?"

The AMERICAN will undertake the task.

We believe there are in New England thousands of typical American girls.

Won't you help us to find her?

Send in her photograph. It should be a modern one, in order that it may do the girl full justice.

The AMERICAN is arranging for a committee to pass in judgment on the one which is most typically the American girl of today.

The young woman thus selected will be painted in oils from life by one of New England's best portrait artists.

This painting will of course become the property of the winner when it is completed. It will be the gift of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

In the meantime groups of pictures of the contestants will be printed in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

All girls residing in New England are eligible to enter this contest. Address your photographs to "Typical American Girl" Editor, Boston AMERICAN, Boston.

The first pictures will be published next Sunday, November 9.

BOSTON JEWS THANK HEARST FOR BEILIS AID

Thousands of Jews of Greater Boston gathered at Sunday mass meetings to pass resolutions urging the State Department in Washington to take immediate action in the Beilis ritual murder case.

Special resolutions were adopted thanking the Hearst newspapers for their stand. The resolution reads:

Whereas, Mendell Beilis, a poor Jewish laborer, is now being tried in Kiev, Russia, for the alleged murder of a Christian boy, Andrei Yushinsky, in March, 1911, and

Whereas, The prosecution has accused the said Beilis of having murdered the boy in order to obtain his blood for use for ritualistic purposes, usually termed the "blood ritual," and

Whereas, The Boston AMERICAN and all the Hearst newspapers of this country have made the first and greatest appeal to the people of this enlightened nation in behalf of Beilis and also in behalf of the millions of the poor, persecuted Jews of the Russian Empire, and

Whereas, The Boston AMERICAN and all the Hearst newspapers know that the use of the blood is absolutely abhorrent to the doctrine, spirit and practice of the Jewish religion and has been so proven by non-Jewish theologians, scientists, publicists and historians,

Be it resolved: That we, citizens of the United States, and members of one of the seventeen lodges of the Independent Order Sons of Israel, assembled on Sunday, November 2, in Faneuil Hall, for our first convention, express our sincere thanks to the Boston AMERICAN and to all the Hearst newspapers for their efforts to obtain for Beilis a fair trial and for their activity in giving publicity to the infamous charges.

Be it further resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the editor of the Boston AMERICAN and also a set of these resolutions to the Hon. William Randolph Hearst.

The Hebrew Bakers' Union has adopted resolution endorsing and approving the AMERICAN'S stand on the Ritual murder case. The resolutions read:

We extend thanks to the Boston AMERICAN for its humanitarian stand against the unjust Beilis trial in Russia. The AMERICAN, with its characteristic love of justice, was the first to cry out against Russia's false and preposterous accusation of the Ritual murder brought against a persecuted and oppressed people through the machinations of a brutal and tyrannical government. We hereby publicly commend the AMERICAN for its stand.

STOCKDALE'S MAID TRIES TO KILL HERSELF

Krista Kohlman, nineteen, employed in the home of the Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, pastor of the Union Congregational Church, attempted suicide today by inhaling illuminating gas at the Stockdale home, No. 1085 Boylston street, Back Bay.

Miss Kohlman plugged the keyhole, speaking tube and transom, closed all the windows and turned on the gas.

Daniel Hardy, a janitor, and Mrs. Stockdale detected the smell of gas through the speaking tube.

She and Hardy broke down the door and found the girl on the floor. The girl was sent to the City Hospital where it was said that she had a chance of recovery.

A letter was found on the table addressed to a woman in East Boston. The cause of the girl's attempt at suicide is a mystery.

Candidate Sullivan Nails Liquor Charge

Former Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan, candidate for the Governor's Council against Alexander McGregor, said today to a noon rally at Malden: "It has been charged that I am a liquor dealer. That charge is not only foolish—it is false. I have here a letter from the licensing commission, which says: 'In relation to your inquiry, your name does not appear on any liquor license in this city.'"

Gleason Now Chief of Chicago Police

RHEUMATIC PAINS PROMPTLY DISAPPEAR

Relief Comes After Taking Few Doses of Croxone.

It is needless to suffer with rheumatism, and be all crippled up, and bent out of shape with its heart-wrenching pains, when you can avoid it.

Rheumatism comes from weak, inactive kidneys, that fail to filter from the blood the poisonous waste matter and uric acid; and the only way to overcome it is to remove the cause.

Croxone does this because it neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous substances and uric acid that lodge in the joints and muscles, to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, inactive kidneys, so they can filter the poison from the blood, and drive it on and out of the system.

Croxone is a truly remarkable medicine for rheumatism, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. You will find it differs from other remedies. There is nothing else just like it. It matters not how old you are, or how long you have suffered, it is practically impossible to take it without results. Relief follows the first few doses, and you will be surprised how quickly all misery and suffering will end.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle and all druggists are authorized to sell it on a positive money-back guarantee. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to overcome the worst backache or urinary disorders.

NINE-DAY BRIDE NOW FILES SUIT FOR A DIVORCE

A romance begun in vacation days in Vermont and shattered early in the honeymoon stage came to light today in the filing at Dedham of a suit for divorce against Harold L. Paige, son of Mrs. Antoinette Paige, the wealthy Wollaston society and clubwoman. The suit is brought by young Paige's "nine-day bride," Mrs. Mary C. Brigham Paige of Boston and Bakersfield, Vt.

She accuses her husband of having been cruel and abusive to her within seven days after their marriage on September 2, 1913. The couple met several years ago when Paige spent his vacation in Vermont.

Mrs. Page is now in Boston. Through her counsel, Felix W. McGettrick, she asks the Norfolk court to allow her to attach her husband's property for $10,000 and to be permitted to resume her maiden name.

"My wife left me, saying she was going to Vermont to get some clothing," said Paige. "I haven't seen her since. I know of no reason why she should leave me. I was neither cruel nor abusive. A married man is no angel, but I was never more an angel than during my nine days of wedded life.

Robinson in Court for B. & M. Theft

Ticket Agent's Case Is Continued Until Thursday.

Albert C. Robinson, the Boston & Maine ticket agent, arrested last night on a charge of the larceny of $5,000 from the road, was arraigned today before Judge Parmenter in the Municipal Court.

He did not plead to the charge and was held till Thursday. His bail was fixed at $6,000. He expected to furnish bail and secure his release at once.

Harvester Trust Briefs Are Filed

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 3.—The International Harvester Company is held up as a benefactor of the American farmer in a brief filed in behalf of the company in the United States court here today. This was the answer to the government's brief in its dissolution suit against the so-called Harvester Trust, which was also filed today.

The government charges that the company controls eighty per cent. of the business in the United States.

Calls Hub World Centre for Missions

The Rev. Dr. L. C. Barnes of New York, secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society, in speaking today before the Baptist ministers in Chipman Hall, said: "Boston is a world centre for giving to mission work and the influence of Boston ministers is felt throughout the West. What Boston does, every other city in the United States wants to do."

Wilson Will Cast Vote in New Jersey

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—President Wilson will go to Princeton tomorrow to vote for James F. Fielder, the Democratic candidate for Governor in New Jersey.

MRS. THOMAS A. EDISON, wife of famous inventor, who has prevailed on him to curtail his work to daylight hours. His rule for many years has been to work far into the night.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Thomas A. Edison has yielded to his wife's pleadings and given up night work.

Mr. Edison was sixty-six years old last February. For years it had been his habit to experiment all night in his laboratory at West Orange, where he dozed when weary on a lounge.

When he recently recovered from a severe attack of indigestion, he remarked cheerfully:

"Now I'll be back in the laboratory as hard at it as ever."

"You will not," answered his physician, Dr. John Hammond Bradshaw, "Your illness has lessened your vitality. You must give up night work."

"Can't do it," retorted Mr. Edison.

"Do you want to leave us?" asked Mrs. Edison, with a tremor in her voice, and that settled it.

Now Mr. Edison breakfasts with his family and is driven to the laboratory by Mrs. Edison in an electric runabout between 8 and 9 o'clock. At 6 in the evening she comes for him.

Mrs. Edison appeared for her husband a few evenings ago, and he told her he thought he would work through the night on an experiment.

"You know what Dr. Bradshaw told you," warned Mrs. Edison.

"That's right; I think I will go home with you," he answered as he grabbed his coat and surrendered.

The inventor's decision has pleased no one more than his daughter Madeline.

HUB PRINCESS IN OVERALLS IN SIBERIAN MINE

Boston relatives of the Princess Belozersky—former Boston girl—are proud of her today. For the princess has gone with her husband from a palatial home in St. Petersburg to a Siberian mining camp—has donned overalls with him there and is helping him in a strenuous effort to regain his lost fortune by hard work.

The Belozerskys have taken their children with them, have forgotten the gaiety of the court and are "up at sunrise and to bed with the sun," busy with good hard work.

The princess was Susan Whittier of Boston. She and the prince were married—a love match—in Paris. The Boston girl was undowered. They went to St. Petersburg, and the prince, with the improvidence of his kind, maintained his beautiful young wife in luxury. For ten years they lived so—then he had to confess that his fortune was gone—except for mining interests in Siberia.

Thither they went—took personal charge of the mines—and are recouping their fortunes.

Among the Boston relatives of the princess are Dr. Chadwick of Marlboro street, Mrs. Julia Codman, Miss Nora Chadwick, E. Gerry Chadwick, Mrs. Douglas Thomas, Jr., and the George T. Lymans.

ASHBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 3.—The fight against the use of wine in the communion was reopened today in the fortieth national convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Mrs. H. E. Hollingshead of Ohio, who is leading the campaign, advocates the use of unfermented grape juice.

"WILD WEST" STEER TRAGEDY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—A tragedy of the Wild West, with all its attendant thrills, was staged in the streets of the city today. One man was shot to death and several were injured when twelve steers, fresh from the Western plains, broke loose and raced wildly through the streets, throwing hundreds into panic.

The terror was increased by pursuing policemen, chasing the steers on horseback and in automobiles and shooting to kill the frenzied animals. More than 100 shots were fired, before the chase ended and one of the stray bullets hit and killed George Beattie, a watchman.

Some of the animals were shot down and killed; others were trampled and taken back to the stockyards, but several are still loose in the city, with the police force searching for them.

While they were being transferred from the car in which they came to a little stockyard along the Hudson River at West Sixtieth street they were frightened by the rumbling of the elevated trains and stampeded. Near Central Park several of the steers saw a red automobile driven by J. J. Mawrey. Bellowing with rage they charged the machine. The impact of seven pairs of horns sent the machine over on its side and Mawrey hurtled through the air and landed stunned and injured in the street.

Customs Appeal By May Van Alen

Mrs. May Van Alen Thompson, the society bride, who was held up by the Boston customs authorities and forced to pay duty on valuable jewels and personal effects, has appealed her case to the Board of General Appraisers in New York, it became known today. Her next step is expected to be an appeal to the Court of Customs Appeals. Her attorney is former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury James F. Curtis of Boston.

Mrs. Thompson's appeal has given the customs officials a puzzle to solve. It is this:

So far as the tariff is concerned, does a woman who marries take the status of her husband or keep her own?

Mrs. Thompson claimed she was not a resident of the United States. Moreover she married abroad.

ROMANTIC LOVE STORY OF EVELYN AND HARRY THAW

CHAPTER LXI.

"From the wild and woolly West."—Frontier Saying.

After chorus girls, massage experts, detectives, head waiters and similar gentry had "worked" the Thaw case for all the publicity possible, it remained for "Scotty of Death Valley" to put the finishing touch of extravagant claim upon the whole.

Out of California, making the transcontinental telegraph wires fairly sizzle, came a typical frontier yarn in which Walter Scott, the "Croesus of Death Valley," asserted that he once saved Thaw's life by taking a "gun" away from Stanford White.

New Yorkers had seen "Scotty," who blazed a spectacular trail up and down Broadway on one of his glittering Eastward trips. So Broadway smiled in a reminiscent manner as it read "Scotty's" interview on the Thaw case. Scotty, in Los Angeles, spoke thus:

I knew Stanford White for some years. I met him when I was a cowboy with Buffalo Bill's show which played at Madison Square Garden.

White was just about as he has been pictured, as to his fondness for women, but he was a good companion and, while I never thought he had much money, he had enough to hold up his end.

He liked Western men and took a fancy to me, so we often had a sitting together.

I can't say whether it was the night of the Old Guard ball or that of the Liquor Dealers' masquerade at the Garden last January that this incident happened.

I was buying wine and was having a squabble with the house over a badly corked bottle for which I had refused to pay. The wine man came along and yelled at me:

"You big bluffer, I can buy and sell you four times over, and you come here trying to run down the wine."

So I stood up and called the wine man some proper names that we use on the desert when we are hunting real trouble.

Just then White came along and asked if I was in trouble. The wine man walked off. White said to me: "Scotty, I thought by the way you looked you were going to kill a man."

I told him that I was not looking for any such game as that. Then, looking me straight in the eye, White said:

"SCOTTY, I AM GOING TO KILL MY MAN TONIGHT. THAT THAW AND HIS WIFE ARE HERE AND I AM GOING TO GET HIM."

Well, I had nothing to do with White's quarrel, and I did not want to see him get in any bad affair, so I took him into a side room to talk it over. I asked him if he had a gun, and he pulled a businesslike piece of artillery out of his pocket. I grabbed the gun, and we had quite a little tussle for it, for I was determined I would get it away from him before anything happened.

Finally I got the gun. White abused me a little, calling me a "four-flusher" and afraid to stand by a friend under fire, but I let him talk and joshed him back. I gave him some advice about how to kill a man in proper shape. Then I stuck the gun in my own pocket.

I'm not a killer myself, and I don't want to be one, if it can be helped, and as I left White it occurred to me that a gun was bad medicine for me to have in a crowd like that, where any kind of a mixup was liable to occur, so I hunted up a policeman I know, whose beat was on Thirty-fourth street and Broadway, and gave him the gun. I asked him to send it to me at my hotel.

The next day the gun was there at the hotel for me. Very soon after that I was called away. I threw the gun in my grip, intending to send it to White sometime. But I forgot all about him until the news of the killing came in the papers.

No, White did not tell me why he had it in for Thaw, but he sure did have.

I was not interested in their mixup. It was none of my business and I did not try to find out the details that night. All I had in mind then was to get the gun away from White. Once I had the gun I forgot about White and Thaw both, for there was a good deal of other excitement going on at the ball itself and I hadn't come there to mix in any rough work.

Have I let Thaw or his lawyer know about this? No, it never occurred to me. But if they want to subpoena me, I'm perfectly willing to tell my story on the stand and will bring forward two men who witnessed the affair and the policeman to whom I gave White's gun that night. I know them all and can find them in New York.

The two other men who know about this were in the ante-room into which I took White when he began his talk about killing Thaw. In the room was a man named King. He is a well-known New York clubman.

The other man is well known, too, but I won't mention his name just now for reasons of my own. But I know I can find the both of them and that they can testify to my scrap with White over the gun. They were there and saw it all, only they didn't interfere. It was none of their funeral and they minded their own business.

Now that you speak of it, it might help Thaw to have this brought out. I did not know Thaw and have no concern about him, one way or another. I may be going to New York after a bit, and if I hear from any of Thaw's lawyers that they would like to talk with me, I am ready to come to the front.

The minute I heard of Thaw's shooting White the incident that I've told flashed over me. It is a queer answer to what went on the night I was there.

According to the theory I had, it would be more likely if White had shot Thaw, as he told me he was going to "get him." But I see it fell the other way, which shows that you never can tell how things will wind up when gun-play begins.

Talk about your "Wild West!" That was spectacular enough—shooting White down at a theatre in the building he built himself, with men and women all around and a play going on. They don't beat that in the West, do they?

"Scotty's" story was read. It was a one-day laugh. And then the public turned its attention again to the really serious side of the Thaw case.

MODERN WRITER WEDS AT GRAVE OF EMERSON

Clasping hands across the tomb of Ralph Waldo Emerson in the famous Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, Concord, Richard Wightman, forty-six, a magazine writer and Mrs. Patricia Margaret Street, thirty-four, a wealthy widow and suffrage leader, were united in marriage.

They came to Concord on October 15, ready to be married. They sought out the Rev. Mr. MacDonald. With the clergyman, they drove to the cemetery.

FROM THE SISTERS OF ST. MARY.

Grateful Letter Tells of Good Results Obtained by Using Father John's Medicine for Colds and Coughs

We have permission to quote from the following letter recently received from the Sisters of St. Mary, at Farnham, N. Y.: The sisters who have been taking Father John's Medicine are perfectly cured of their cough, after having tried several other kinds of cough medicine without the least beneficial effects. We are sincerely grateful and would like to recommend Father John's Medicine to all as the very best cure for the most stubborn coughs and colds. Gratefully yours. (Signed) Sisters of St. Mary, Farnham, N. Y.

It is important to remember that Father John's Medicine is so valuable in the treatment of colds because it is composed of nourishing food elements which give new strength and rebuild wasted tissue. As a tonic Father John's Medicine has had over 50 years' success. It is a doctor's prescription, not a patent medicine, and is free from alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form. Thousands of mothers give it to their children to build them up at this time of the year.

Consumption Takes 350 People Daily

in the United States, and the deadly germs claim more victims in cities than in rural districts, due no doubt to the increased number of indoor workers in confining quarters and their lack of sunshine.

Tubercular germs always attack when the system is weakened from colds or sickness, overwork, overstrain, confining duties or any drain which has reduced the resistive forces of the body. But nature always provides a corrector, and the best physicians emphasize that during changing climate our blood should be kept rich and pure and active by taking Scott's Emulsion after meals; the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion warms the body by enriching the blood—it peculiarly strengthens the lungs and upbuilds the resistive forces of the body to avoid colds and prevent consumption.

If you work indoors, tire easily, feel languid or nervous, Scott's Emulsion is the most strengthening food-medicine known; it builds energy and strength and is totally free from alcohol or any stupefying drug—every druggist has it. 13-106. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN BOSTON AMERICAN

"LANDSLIDE WILL PUT ME IN," FOSS INSISTS

In his final statement before the election tomorrow, Governor Eugene N. Foss, candidate for re-election, declared that he will carry the State by a "landslide" vote. In part he said:

"I claim my re-election as Governor by a landslide of independent votes. I make this claim, not only upon the basis of a careful canvass, but upon the poll published by a Boston newspaper.

"The greatest vote in this campaign will be the silent vote. I claim that this is the independent vote and that it will be cast for me.

"Everybody knows that the Democratic vote is not silent. What is now claimed as the Gardner vote will be expressed on election day in the bolt of the Republican voters from him to me. Republicans will vote neither for the candidate of the Progressive Party nor for the candidate of the Tammany Trio. This large Independent Republican vote will come to me. I have already defeated Walsh, and the whole Independent Democratic vote will be cast for me.

"The Progressive campaign has been not upon issues but upon a show of enthusiasm. The Bird vote is a noisy vote.

"Stolen My Record."

"Every man who believes in what Bird says should vote for me, and most of them will. Having stolen my record for his platform, Bird now caps the climax by a belated discovery of the Tammany Trio and the assumption of it as his issue. Not a Bird vote has remained silent.

"The votes that remain silent are the votes of independents. There are special reasons for silence in this campaign. The revolt both of working men and of partisans against the present leadership of their organizations will be expressed for the first time on election day.

"Nobody doubts that revolt or that the whole independent vote will come to me.

"I have every element of strength I ever had. I began the campaign with this strength. Even at the start the opposition to me as the strongest man with the people and the only one with a record was divided among the three machine candidates. And the great silent independent vote that is coming out in this election will be added to my former strength.

"To say I won't get forty thousand votes is absurd. The farmers alone cast forty thousand votes, and a careful canvass shows that the farmers are for me to a man. And no Governor was ever elected in Massachusetts without the farmer vote.

"In the great City of Boston, moreover, the vote will be cast on the basis of a mayoralty contest.

"The Tammany Trio."

"I have shown in this campaign that the State is a great municipal enterprise. This fact is of interest not only to every citizen of this State without regard to his partisan politics, but it is also of peculiar interest to the citizens of Boston. I have shown that most of the powers in the honest exercise of which the people of the City of Boston are most vitally interested are lodged in the Governor and that the exercise of these powers by the machine of the Tammany Trio would amount to a political revolution and a public calamity.

"The voters of Boston have a double interest in my election and the defeat of Walsh.

"The election of Walsh would mean the re-election of Fitzgerald as Mayor of Boston. The two men are tied up together. The time for the people of Boston to defeat Fitzgerald for Mayor is in this election, and they are going to defeat him as emphatically as the people of Massachusetts voted to defeat him for United States Senator last year. A majority of the votes cast upon the question of recalling the Mayor of Boston at that time were in favor of his recall.

"Now the way to defeat the Tammany Trio is not to throw away votes on the candidates of the Progressive and Republican machines, who are working for the Tammany Trio. The only way to this defeat is to vote for the only man who has disclosed the danger and has shown the ability to meet it, not only in this campaign, but in the office of Governor.

"The people of Boston and the people of the State outside of Boston know that this is the only way, and they are going to take it.

"The people in the towns and outside of municipalities are just as much interested in my success as the people of the City of Boston. As the Springfield Republican puts it, Franklin County is coming to Foss by leaps and bounds.

"If the people in the country can see that I am the man to save the city and the State from the Tammany Trio, the citizens of Boston certainly are well aware of that fact.

"I shall carry the City of Boston without a doubt.

"And I shall carry Cambridge, Newton, Somerville and the whole of Greater Boston. In this territory the Tammany opposition to me is weak, and it is divided into three parts.

"The people of the whole State are thoroughly aroused to the true facts of the political situation.

"I shall carry the western part of the State by a tremendous plurality.

"I feel sure that I shall carry the cities of Springfield and Worcester, and I am supported in this by the reports and opinions that have come to me from the leading citizens there of all parties.

"I expect to carry not only Lowell, Haverhill, Lynn, Chelsea and Lawrence, but also Fall River and New Bedford."

This election is going to be a landslide. No other candidate has presented any issues to the people and the ones that I have presented have appealed to every thoughtful citizen of the Commonwealth. The landslide is going to re-elect me Governor of Massachusetts, and the votes of the avalanche will be the votes of the independent citizens of the Commonwealth who are now ominously silent.

MASCULINE TREND TO FALL STYLES SHOWN AT AUTEUIL RACES

PARIS, Nov. 3.—Fall styles at the Auteuil races have distinct masculine features. The hats are black velvet, modeled on the lines of a man's top hat with feathers rising two inches above the crown.

Silk collars of the Gladstone type, held in position by a gold pin, were worn with tailored suits. Ties were worn with standup wing collars.

Income Tax Halts Haughty Landlord

Tenant Now May Hold Out Rent Until Law Is Met.

Though many wealthy Bostonians got a headache trying to figure out the kinks in the new United States Income Tax law, there was one gleam of joy in the midst of the gloom. Under a provision of the law a tenant who pays $3,000 or more rent may hold out from the landlord the latter's income tax thereon and pay it over to the government.

Not only that, but the landlord, the tax experts at Washington say, must file with the tenant a statement of the amount of non-taxable deduction from the rent, together with an itemized account of his income from all other sources.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Electric Motor Car Club of Boston announces that they will hold an electric automobile salon in the ballroom of the Copeley Plaza Hotel on November 17, 18 and 19. Every Boston representative of electric pleasure cars will have an exhibit. There will be no commercial vehicles in this show, as the truck men are to have a show later. Much attention will be given the details so as to make everything in keeping with the elegance of electric vehicles.

The club is endeavoring to make arrangements so that on the day that the show will be on two sides of the hotel will be reserved for electric motor cars. The show will be opened from 10 a. m. until 11 p. m.

The committee has been appointed with Herbert W. Moses, manager of the last Boston electric show, as supervisor. The exhibits committee consists of John L. Snow, Albert Wetherby, J. W. Bowman, E. A. Gilmore and D. F. Tiffaney.

The Electric Motor Car Club will be the guests of the Edison Boston Company at a luncheon in the Edison Building, on Boylston street, today, where plans for the show will be discussed.

It is rumored that a large taxicab company is about to be organized by a group of Boston business men under the management of E. M. Osgood, who has come from Buffalo to formulate the preliminary plans. The new company is negotiating with Gray & Davis, Inc., for the rental of the premises recently occupied by Gray & Davis, on Lansdowne street.

F. W. Wilkening, manager of the Motor Parts Company, 187 Columbus avenue, distributors of the Bosch magneto, says that the series of records recently acquired by a Bosch-equipped sunbeam was added to by a 12-cylinder car of the same make, which was successful in an attempt against the one-half record on Friday, October 10. The car covered 107 miles, 1,672 yards, which is an average of 107.95 miles per hour. Incidentally, this car also obtained records for the 50, 100 and 150-mile distances, so that a Bosch-equipped car now holds all world's records from 50 to 1,000 miles. The record was made at Brooklands, England.

HINT AT BREAK BETWEEN BRYAN AND GARRISON

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

PANAMA, Nov. 3.—The rumor is current in official circles that there is a breach between Secretary of War Garrison and Secretary of State Bryan, owing to the latter's efforts through his friend and editor, Governor Metcalfe, to control the Canal Zone. The report is that President Wilson was influenced by Bryan to hold up reorganization against the advice of Garrison.

An open break seems near between the State and the War Departments.

Part of the Bryan-Metcalfe plan, as the rumor has it, is to overthrow Hitchcock, the Nebraska Senator, and to install Metcalfe as the Bryan leader of the State, the Canal patronage to be used.

Those who voice this report say that Nebraskans are becoming numerous on the Isthmus since Governor Metcalfe's arrival. It is even said that the ultimate end in view is the transfer of the Canal to the State Department to give Bryan full swing.

The expectation is that Secretary Garrison will uphold Goethals in the report he makes when he returns to Washington and fight for its adoption.

Two Missing Girls Have Been Found

One Was With Friends, Other Working in Hotel.

Two girls who have been mysteriously missing for the past eight days and for whom the police of Greater Boston have been searching, were found today. One of them, eighteen-year-old Jennette Silva, of the Back Bay, returned to her home. The other girl, thirteen-year-old Olive Smith of Norfolk, was located at Norfolk Downs, Quincy.

Miss Silva told her father, Emilius Silva of No. 44 Falmouth street, she had been visiting friends in Dorchester. The Smith girl was found at work in a Norfolk Downs hotel. She had been dismissed from school and feared she would be "sent away," so she left home. Her parents have been notified.

Tee Up! Smoke Up!

ALEX ROSS

Alex Ross, Professional, Brae Burn Country Club, Auburndale, Mass., Open Champion of Massachusetts six times; National Open Champion 1907, says:

"Tuxedo, cool and mild, is essentially the smoke that satisfies. Many of my fellow golfers agree with me in giving preference to Tuxedo."

Alexander Ross

AS satisfying as the sounding smack of the perfect drive, is the open-air relish of the perfect smoke—Tuxedo. Both go together, too. When you grab your bag and start for the links, grab up your tin of Tuxedo and take it along.

"Follow through" the snappy afternoon with Tuxedo. Put Tuxedo in your pipe and you will "put" the best. And at "the nineteenth hole" rest up and relax with a good, solid smoke of Tuxedo. That's the advice of good golfers everywhere.

Next time you want added flavor, zest and enjoyment to your game, try the Famous Green Tin with America's favorite tobacco in it. When you get to that green, the going's good.

TOM VARDON

Tom Vardon, Professional, Onwentsia Club, second in British Open Championship 1903, second in French Open Championship 1906, says:

"Tuxedo tobacco can be used in pipe or cigarette. In either case it is an agreeable companion to the golfer. We are old friends."

JACK HOBENS

Jack Hobens, Professional at the Englewood Country Club, N. J., Metropolitan Open Champion 1908 and second in 1911, says:

"I smoke Tuxedo tobacco because it suits me, and I have no desire to change. The best is always good enough for me. Tuxedo is the golfer's smoke."

John Hobens

When hundreds of men of national repute say frankly and emphatically that Tuxedo is by far the most satisfactory tobacco made—and naturally they have tried the others—one thing is certain—it's worth your while to try Tuxedo.

Especially is it worth your while if a sensitive tongue prevents pipe smoking. Tuxedo positively cannot bite—not even if you smoke pipeful after pipeful, as many as you can crowd into a day or a week.

Tuxedo is made of only the finest, choicest, selected leaves of perfectly aged Burley tobacco. It is made by the original "Tuxedo Process" which removes every trace of bite and sting and develops all the wonderful mildness, fragrance and flavor of the Burley leaf in a way that no other brand of tobacco has ever successfully imitated.

WILLIAM H. POTTS

William H. Potts, Professional, Apawamis Club, Rye, N. Y., well-known instructor and player, says:

"The absolute purity and mild fragrance of Tuxedo make a great hit among golfers. I'm for Tuxedo."

LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION RITCHIE OFFERED BIG PURSE TO MEET TOMMY MURPHY IN COAST BOUT

SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT

By Tad

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

Ritchie and Murphy May Meet on Coast

By JACK CONWAY.

WILLIE RITCHIE will soon have to employ a financial secretary, as he is daily receiving fabulous offers for his services. The Frisco boy will get $10,000 for boxing ten three-minute rounds with Leach Cross in New York on November 10. There will not be any decision rendered and so the only way Ritchie can lose his lightweight title is by being knocked out.

San Francisco promoters are trying to arrange for a match between Ritchie and Tommy Murphy to take place on Thanksgiving Day. They have offered Ritchie $16,500 for his end of the purse.

Ritchie is willing to battle Murphy, but will probably ask for a date later than Thanksgiving Day. He is not anxious to clash with a rugged, two-handed fighter like Murphy so soon after his contest with Cross, which promises to be a fast, hard battle.

Ritchie has a chance to make more money than any lightweight champion of recent years. The purses offered to ring stars today are larger than they were five and ten years ago, while there are plenty of worthy opponents for Ritchie. Consequently, large crowds turn out whenever the doughty Coast youth performs.

A bout between Ritchie and Packey McFarland at 133 pounds would be one of the biggest "cards" of the decade, from a financial standpoint. If these men should fight in New York, between $35,000 and $40,000 would probably be taken in at the gate.

McFarland has fought his best battles in the big city and as a result is a tremendous favorite there. If he were pitted against a man of Ritchie's calibre, Madison Square Garden would be taxed to its greatest capacity. Packey is a better boxer than the lightweight king, but Ritchie is a stiffer puncher than the stock yard favorite and his strength might enable him to breeze in a winner.

Ritchie would realize about $15,000 from such a tussle. There would not be any danger of his being knocked out, as the Chicago welterweight is not a hard puncher. Packey might outpoint Ritchie, but the latter would still be the lightweight champion and would be in a position to continue and demand $10,000 and $15,000 purses for his services.

EAGAN CHALLENGES RIVALS.

A LIGHTWEIGHT boxer does not have to look far for matches if he happens to reside in New England. There are a number of 133 and 135-pound boxers in this section of the country who are capable of giving a good account of themselves against the best men of their weight in the country.

Matty Baldwin challenged the local lightweights the other day, and the Hunker Hill boy's ded was only a few hours old when Alex McLean, in behalf of Gilbert Gallant, stated that he was ready to pit the Chelsea boy against Baldwin.

Baldwin and Gallant, of course, would each prefer a match with Eddie Murphy, who is rated as the best man of his weight in New England.

Joe Eagan has now entered the lists of the New England title chasers. Eddie Mack, Eagan's manager, called at this office today and had a few words to say about Murphy, Baldwin, Gallant and Co. He said in part:

"Murphy has defeated Baldwin, Gallant and Eagan. Therefore, I do not believe that any member of this trio is entitled to a bout with the South Boston lightweight just now.

"A series of bouts should be arranged between Baldwin, Gallant and Eagan and the winner could then be matched with Baldwin. The public would then be interested in the New England championship encounter.

"Eagan has not boxed since he lost to Murphy, but has been training for a week and is in good condition again and will soon be ready to meet all-comers. Joe was defeated by Murphy, but gave Eddie a better battle than either Baldwin or Gallant did, and I am sure that he would be able to vanquish either of these men."

WELSH AND SAYLOR AGAIN.

MILBURN "YOUNGO" SAYLOR will meet Freddy Welsh, the English lightweight champion, in a twelve-round, no-decision bout in Winnipeg, Canada, on November 10. This will be the second bout between these two men. The first contest was staged several weeks ago, and Welsh won on a foul. Saylor claimed that the blow which knocked out the English title holder was a fair one and the return bout has been arranged in order to clear up the muddle.

EASY MONEY FOR SMITH.

"GUNBOAT" SMITH continues to annex all the "easy money" in sight. It was a joke watching the gunner against a third-rater like Charley Miller. As long as Smith is able to secure fat guarantees for fighting men like Miller, he will not sign for another "go" with Carl Morris. When these men last met, Smith won on a foul in five rounds, but there were a number of "fans" who saw the bout who were cruel enough to declare that the former tar quit. Far be it from us to enter into a controversy which centres around the courage possessed by one of our leading little "white hopes."

Federal Contract to Suit Fraternity

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 3.—A form of contract which, it is said, is acceptable to the Baseball Players' Fraternity was adopted at the session of the Federal League magnates here. This action is another move in the baseball war which the Federal League purposes to carry to the major leagues. It has been reported that unless the major leagues include in their contracts certain conditions demanded by the players' fraternity the players will refuse to sign and will turn to the Federal League.

It was announced at the meeting that George Stovall, former major league manager, had signed to lead the Kansas City Federal club next season.

Four clubs filed with Acting President J. A. Gilmore of Chicago a list of major league players with whom they had been negotiating.

Connecticut Man, Manacled, Tows 7 Men in Swim

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Henry Ellonsky, the New London, Ct., long-distance swimmer, yesterday swam from the Brooklyn Bridge to Bay Ridge, a distance of about four miles, with hands and feet tied, towing a boat in which were seven men. The total weight of the boat and its occupants was 1,363 pounds. Ellonsky took to the water at 12.50 p. m. and finished at 4 p. m.

MARANVILLE TELLS
"HOW I GOT MY START IN BIG LEAGUE BASEBALL"

By WALTER J. (RABBIT) MARANVILLE.*

I HAVE been asked many times to give lectures and other talks on baseball. Numerous persons have requested me to tell them how I became a ball player. I have never been able to fully describe all the troubles and trials I have had to contend with in order that I should some day become a major league player. Sporting writers have at several times told how I came to break into the big league, despite the fact that I was under a big handicap on account of my height and weight. What I intend to do now is to give advice to all the amateur ball players who are, as myself, under a height and weight handicap. I know of several good boys who could make the big league if they were to get the proper instructions.

WILL ANSWER QUESTIONS IN AMERICAN.

Through the columns of the AMERICAN, I will answer all questions pertaining to baseball, in the same manner that the innumerable questions asked of me of baseball experts, were answered. Some critics are made to believe that the life of a ball player is anything but profitable. They go so far as to remark that by the time the Winter is over, the average ball player is glad to get back on the payroll of some club, in order that he may get money to pay bills contracted during the lay-off season.

This, I must say, is a gross misapprehension, as far as good players are concerned. There is always a demand for ball players in all walks of life. There is first, the ever-ready vaudeville opening, such as I am engaged in at present. One of my team mates, Tom Griffith, who played right field for the Braves last season, and myself are at present doing a singing act at the National Theatre. This does not, however, tend to point out that all ball players have a chance to go on the stage. Fortunately, Griffith and myself are able to sing, as well as play ball, or we would be engaged in other occupations.

Willing to Give Advice.

Numerous letters have already been answered by me from my home in Springfield, where I have received requests for information, from amateur ball players. I must say, that I am always pleased and willing to give advice to any one who wants to become a ball player. The sport in itself, is the most healthful exercise that could be indulged in. Each and every muscle is exercised, and the fact that games are played in the open air, means that your lungs are always filled with the fresh air, which is so needful in keeping up the human body.

I first started to play ball when I was only seven years old. My older brother and sometimes my father would engage themselves with me in a game of "catch." Of course, being only a little fellow, I could not handle all the balls that were thrown to me, but they insisted that if I tried, I would be able to "get onto 'em." I continued my almost daily practice with my brother, who soon got me a chance to play on a kid nine. They placed me at short, and while I did not make a very good impression at the start, I kept at it.

Valuable Talk with an Old Fan.

Some time later, another game was arranged, and I was again told to go out and play shortstop. In that game, I remember well, I struck out each time I came to bat, although my playing in the field was pretty good for a kid. My brother then started to give me some batting practice (which I needed), and then got me on a team when I was ten years old. The first ball pitched when I was at bat, struck me on the neck and I was in the hospital for two months. An old "fan" who was watching the game called at the hospital one day, and when he came into the ward I was in, he asked the doctor if he might talk with me for an hour. His request granted, the old "fan" sat by my cot and gave me the following talk:

"I was watching you," he began, "when you came to bat. I noticed that you did not even know how to stand at the plate. Now, when you get better, I am going to give you a few lessons in ball playing, that you will never forget."

My very good friend kept his promise, and when I was discharged from the hospital, he took me to a vacant lot and for three whole hours, kept throwing a baseball at me, while I stood at the plate. Believe me, good readers, when I got through with that old "fan," I knew how to get out of the way of a pitched ball.

That is just one of the many instances in which I learned baseball. All through my career, people kept giving me advice, as to how I could play the game in order to get the best results. All the advice I obtained while playing on amateur teams, and what knowledge I have attained in the big league is at the disposal of the AMERICAN readers, and from day to day, I will answer all sensible questions pertaining to the national game. All requests that players want treated as confidential, will not be considered. It is my purpose to answer all questions in this column.

Athletics' Young Pitcher May Wed

BRAINERD, Minn., Nov. 3.—Leslie Lee Bush, the Athletics' pitchers, who made a special trip from this, his home town, to Philadelphia for the banquet to the world champion Athletics, last week, arrived home again. Bush plans spending the Winter here, and will also go on several hunting trips. It is also rumored that a matrimonial venture will occupy some of his attention during the off season. She isn't a Philadelphia girl, neither has she ever seen a world's series, but resides here in Brainerd, and the two have been friends since childhood.

Report Cobb and Speaker in Three Cornered Deal

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The latest sensational baseball story is to the effect that negotiations are under way for a big three-cornered deal involving the New York Americans, the Detroits and Red Sox, by which Tris Speaker will become a member of Chance's team, and Ty Cobb will go to the Hub.

In the absence of Manager Chance, President Farrell of the New Yorks said that he had no knowledge of the supposed deal. There is no doubt, however, that Farrell and Chance would agree to almost any proposition that would bring Speaker to this city. President Navin of the Detroit club stated recently that he might agree to trade Cobb for Speaker, but that no other transaction would appeal to him.

Ritchie Is Training to Develop Speed

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Ritchie's friends who saw him at work today said that the lightweight champion was a trifle worried over the outcome of the bout with Leach Cross because of the ten-round distance. They explained that Ritchie was slow in getting started and that he had shown this defect in bouts with Welgast, Rivers and Mandot. Ritchie is training more for speed than anything else.

It is said that he has hit upon a plan to work himself up to the top notch. He intends to box half a dozen smart rounds with a sparring partner in the dressing room just before he starts for the ring to meet Cross. Ritchie admits that Cross is better equipped for a ten-round bout inasmuch as he has been travelling that route many times in recent years.

Schoolboy Sport Notes

MECHANIC ARTS' win over English High has upset all calculations of the standing of schools for the city title. For Mechanic Arts suffered defeat at the hands of Commerce, while English had been victorious over Dorchester. The blue and blue team entered the game a favorite, but Mechanic displayed better football in every department of the game.

THOMPSON of Newton High is one of the fastest backs in the high school circles. Time after time he made some brilliant runs in the Somerville game. He always is in the game. If he is not carrying the ball he is forming good interference.

STEVE MAHONEY'S team is a crippled lot all right. Four of his regulars are out of the game. Ellis, the mainstay of the backfield, has a bad ankle; Bianchi has a broken wrist; H. Anderson has a fractured rib and Cushing has bruises.

FAY is putting up a whirlwind of a game at centre for Roxbury Latin. Fay is heavy and has the makings of a good line man.

* * *

"BUNK" LALLY of Mechanic Arts came back into the game with flying colors. A touchdown, goal from touchdown and a goal from field from the forty-yard line is such a bad day's work.

* * *

CAPTAIN BRYLIN is the mainstay of the St. John's backfield. His playing this Fall has been excellent.

* * *

* * *

MECHANICS has a good man in Elliott. His playing at tackle has contributed greatly to the good showing of the team.

* * *

WALTHAM'S backfield, consisting of Eaton, Leary and Richardson, is a speedy combination. They have proved havoc with other high school lines this Fall. All three are big and fast and carry the ball well.

EVERETT won its first Suburban League game easily. Coach Cleo O'Donnell's boys have done well so far. They have not been beaten or scored on this Fall.

* * *

DUSKEY is playing a brilliant game at halfback for Everett. Much is expected of him in coming big games.

* * *

SALEM lost the first game to Powder Point. Up till now Salem had not been defeated, but was held once to a tie by Hingham.

* * *

WALTHAM, Newton, Everett and Haverhill are school eleven leading for the State title. None of these teams has been beaten. A great game is expected next Saturday, when Newton and Waltham clash at Waltham. If Everett goes through the season without a defeat it will challenge any school claiming the title.

* * *

FROM now on it will be "nothing but hard work for the schoolboy eleven, who are getting ready for their big Thanksgiving Day games. Many a boy will be getting home late to his supper, and many lessons will be neglected by the youthful gridiron warriors. The last part of the season is always the hardest for the boys.

EXETER OUT TO BREAK RIVAL'S GREAT RECORD

By OTTO B. HANSON.

The great "Harvard-Yale" battle of preparatory schools will be played next Saturday when the elevens of Phillips Exeter and Phillips Andover Academies clash on Plimpton Field, Exeter, in their annual tussle.

For eight successive years football teams representing Exeter have gone down to defeat before the mighty elevens that have represented Andover and in but two seasons during this space of time have the Exeter teams been able to score on Andover. This year, however, the followers of the New Hampshire school predict that a string of Exeter victories will be started.

The team that represents the Granite State school this season is the best that has been developed there for many years.

The New Hampshire team has made a very good record in its preparatory games, while the work of the Andover eleven has been a bitter disappointment to its followers.

Exeter has gone through its preliminary season with great success and the squad is rich in good football material. In several of the positions the players are nearly evenly matched.

Exeter Has Wonderful Backs.

Exeter has a wonderful backfield quartet. In previous years Exeter has had fairly good teams, but always at the critical moments lacked the necessary punch to push the ball over for a score. This weakness of years seems to have been thoroughly overcome this season and the Exeter students expect their team to pile up a big score against their deadly rivals.

The backfield candidates are "Fido" Kempton, the former Malden High star; McDonough of Manchester, N. H.; Eddie Casey, who starred on Natick High two years ago; Quigley, Bingham, Enright, "Chet" LaRoache, of Dorchester, Dave Campbell of Everett, and Clough.

Kempton appears to have a slight shade on McDonough for the quarterback position and will probably start the game next Saturday. Kempton and McDonough are two of the most evenly matched players that ever battled for the same position on a football team. The two have their fine points and in all probability both will be given a chance against Andover.

Enright, the former Worcester Academy player, will play fullback and he should prove a good ground gainer. Quigley has been playing regularly at left halfback this season, but sustained an injury in practice last week and this may keep him out of the game. Clough, who played his position Saturday against the Princeton freshmen, put up a wonderful game and his work apparently has earned him a chance to show what he can do against Andover. Eddie Casey has been a mainstay in the Exeter backfield this season.

"Bulger" Lowe a Star.

The line from end to end is one of the best that has been developed at Exeter for many years. "Bulger" Lowe, the former Arlington star, is playing right end. His work this season stamps him as one of the best ends on school teams in the country. Lowe is as fast as lightning in getting under punts and a sure tackler. Compton on the other wing position is also putting up a whirlwind game.

Captain Kirkpatrick is showing his old time form at left tackle, Lynch is holding the right tackle position like a stonewall and McGrath and Neal are a pair of wonderful guards. Kelly plays the pivot position faultlessly.

Important College Games Start this Week

Saturday's Gridiron Battles Will Determine Relative Standing of Big Teams.

By SYDE LINES.

A NUMBER of football battles of greatest importance will be staged this Saturday, and the results will be in a great measure determine the relative positions of the different big teams in the season's play. After the outcome of a number of games played last week, the results of next Saturday, are not at all certain, particularly in the cases of Harvard versus Princeton, Yale and Brown and last but not least by any means, Dartmouth and Pennsylvania. Harvard plays at Princeton right in the midst of Jungleland, and Dartmouth invades Pennsylvania territory. After Princeton's great showing against Holy Cross, a real comeback after the play with Dartmouth on the preceding Saturday, it is very evident to everyone concerned that Harvard will have plenty to do in overcoming the Tigers, particularly as the game is to be played on the Orange and Black's native heath.

GREEN FAVORITE OVER PENNSY.

DARTMOUTH'S victory over Amherst, hard earned as it was, doubtless dissipated any feeling of overconfidence that may have existed in the Green eleven, and there will be a battle royal against Pennsy, with the odds slightly in favor of Dartmouth.

After its poor showing against Colgate, Yale will doubtless have its hands full in holding Brown down, to say nothing of beating the Providence eleven.

Despite its wretched game with Colgate, we still maintain that the next few weeks will show a big improvement in the playing of the Yale eleven. In short there will be a comeback, and the rest of the games are in no way decided as yet. Yale showed an insufficiency of offense that was pitiable, while the defense was shown up as still a very leaky proposition, and the coaches at New Haven have still a season's work ahead of them to turn out a real team.

TIGERS COMING FAST.

PRINCETON showed a different team and one that had plenty of punch, which mingled with a versatility of attack and fierceness of play, stamped the Tigers as a coming team.

Harvard on the other hand showed a very satisfactory game against Cornell, and proved that the eleven is making consistent progress in every department of the game, except in the kicking line. The punting of Hardwick and Willetts, was really something terrific, and the short kicks of the latter, really opened the way for a Cornell touchdown in the third period, for a reasonably long kick would have dispatched the ball well into Ithacan territory and well out of threatening range of the Crimson goal.

Just why this bad slump should have come at this time, is hard to understand, particularly in view of the fact that H. B. Sprague, '11, a first class punter in his day, has been coaching the kickers for the past couple of weeks. Hardwick's kicking at the start of the season was very good, and he did send away several good ones during the game with Cornell, but his average was poor, and against Princeton this would be of tremendous disadvantage to Harvard.

MAHAN CANNOT PLAY SATURDAY.

THERE is plenty of gloom in the camp of Harvard adherents just about this time, for there does not seem to be the slightest possibility that "Eddie" Mahan, the fleet end runner of the Crimson will be able to get into the conflict with Princeton, a serious blow to Harvard's chances in that game. Princeton has been rather weak at the end of the line this year and Crimson followers were counting on Mahan for big gains in this direction. In addition to this, Mahan had practically been selected to do the punting for Harvard, as he has been giving great promise in this line. His loss at this time, therefore, is really of the greatest significance, and it is to be sincerely hoped he will not be out for long. He is still in the Stillman Infirmary, and the poison in his foot has come to a head, which makes it seem certain he will not be out this week.

O'BRIEN WILL BE BACK.

FRANK O'BRIEN, regular left end, who has been out of the game for a week with an injured side, is in shape again and will be gladly welcomed back at his position, where his absence was sorely felt, while Hitchcock's ankle is about well, and there is no reason why he should not get in against Princeton. He is badly needed at tackle, for Withington's showing was as poor as could have been against Cornell, and Morgan who took his place, is too inexperienced a man, although his playing was far above Withington's.

SEVERAL MINOR INJURIES.

WHILE Harvard came through the Cornell game with no very serious injuries, there were minor ones, which will necessitate the recipients having a little lay off, Trumbull sustained a bruise in his side, while Hardwick barked his shin pretty badly, and Cowen twisted his leg. These three will hold a position on Cripples Row for a short time, but there is no reason why they should not help against the Tigers.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

IN a moment of mental abberation the other day the writer foolishly made a brief comment on Old Man Anson and his stonewall infield. It was a great mistake. The writer regrets saying anything about Old Man Anson and his stonewall infield. He would recall the words if it were possible, but it is too late. They should never have been written.

The mistake of making the most trifling comparison of old-time ball players with the ball players of today lies in the fact that all the old-time fans rise enmasse and knock you on the head. The safe thing to do is to say the old-time ball players were the greatest that ever lived; that they could wipe the diamond with the champions of today; that Anson, Brouthers, Start and Connor, as first basemen; Burdock, Pfeffer and Dunlap, as second basemen; Wright, Williamson and Glasscock, as shortstops; Denny, Sutton and Mulvey as third basemen, and Welch, Stovey and Gore, as outfielders (or any other old-timers you care to name) were the best players that ever lived.

THE ink was hardly dry on the Anson paragraph before the old-time fans began to take a fall out of the writer. Here is a copy of the first letter received:

Dear Sir—You are evidently one of those know-it-all fellows who hold the present day baseball player so superior to the old timer. Although you have not perhaps seen the REAL OLD TIMER.

You joke about Anson in his dotage and sneer at the ability of his stonewall infield.

Why not obtain expert opinion in the matter? Call up Tim Murane, George Wright, Johnnie Morrill, Tommie Bond or other old-timers and learn that Anson was correct in placing Burns at short and Williamson at third.

They have played for a long time, however, in the positions you mention so you are partially correct, and they played them in either arrangement equally well.

Then ask them to compare that old Chicago Stone Wall with the best the present day enjoys, but first strip the present day player of his big pillows which he uses to knock down the ball when hit instead of picking it up or stopping it with the naked hand like the Anson Stone Wall.

When you get your answer print it and you will find it may prove a surprise to your readers to find an old-timer who has seen them all along down the line declare the present day is not so much. Yours for

THE OLD TIMER.

Of course it is nice to be called "young" even if the sting of "know-it-all" goes with it. Would that the writer was a "young know-it-all." But, alas, the writer is no spring chicken—not even a broiler. In order to square himself with his readers he will confess that he saw his first league game (or at least such portions of it as were permitted by a policeman) through a knot hole at the South End grounds in 1877. He played against the Bostons (one game only) in 1886. He saw Anson and his men as often as he could whenever they came to Boston. He never saw Williamson play third base and he never saw Burns play shortstop. Maybe they used to play those positions, but the writer doesn't recall it.

What do the other old-timers say about it?

THE writer believes that individually many of the old-time players were just as clever, and in some cases more so, than the best players of the present day. But in speed and team work the writer believes the present-day ball clubs outclass those of twenty and thirty years ago.

There is absolutely no way of proving a statement like the above. It is simply an opinion. In nearly every other branch of athletics there is a way of proving that the present-day athletes are better than those of twenty and thirty years ago. The clock and the tape-measure have made the proof. But in baseball records count for nothing.

WITH these few words we will drop the subject of the old-timers and the writer promises to make no more comparisons.

THE annual meeting of the American League will be held in Chicago this week. The date was put forward this year in order that President Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox, could attend the meeting before leaving on his trip around the world with the two ball teams. President McAleer and Secretary-Treasurer McRoy will represent the Red Sox at the meeting, after which McAleer will join Comiskey for the circle around the globe.

Mystery Veils Heroes of Colgate Victory

By DAMON RUNYON.

With the returns from every precinct in Boston practically complete, and one in Revere heard from, it appears that the details of the Colgate-Yale game at New Haven Saturday afternoon are still veiled in much mystery.

The result of 16 to 6 in favor of Colgate is generally admitted, and the mental anguish at Yale cannot be denied, but an official investigation will be necessary to uncover the minute transactions of the Colgate team during the contest before individual guilt for glorious deeds can be established.

There are a lot of young gentlemen connected with that team who are undoubtedly entitled to considerable fame, and they will receive it as soon as they can be ferreted out and publicly exposed. Meantime, however, a careful canvass of the various and varying accounts of the pastime confirms a suspicion that hovered darkly over the press stand at New Haven Saturday that the Colgate delegation was the most secretive and surreptitious band of young men who ever took the football field.

Three stories of the game printed yesterday morning credited Swartout with the first Colgate touchdown. Three others gave it to Ramsey. Two said it was Olney, and two more blamed H. Sullivan.

Riley Accused of Touchdown.

Riley was accused by four of the second Colgate touchdown—the one that came after Knowles' fumble behind the Yale goal—while Swartout was suggested by two and H. Sullivan by two.

In the matter of kicking the Colgate goal after the second touchdown, three tales tacked the honor to Peterson and three to Huntington, while three others declined to give a decision.

Six stories said it was Brooks that kicked the Colgate goal from placement; two charged it to H. Sullivan, and one to Parker.

As you see, young Mr. Brooks is the only Colgate player who came close to a clear majority on any one movement of the game, and that was in connection with the goal from field. Personally, we were in there supporting a Mr. Parker, but apparently no one else could see our choice, so we bow to the popular will. We desire, however, to call attention to the fact that this paper, with its usual enterprise, scored a notable beat in that connection. We were exclusively wrong on Mr. Parker.

We had some thought of nominating H. Sullivan for the field goal, on account of his last name, refraining only because we were a little fearful that the "H" might stand for Harold. Moreover, we had already given Mr. Sullivan credit for a touchdown, and it seemed to us that it was a most auspicious moment for the insertion of Mr. Parker into the story.

Well Qualified to Kick Goal.

It seemed to us that Mr. Parker had all the qualifications necessary for kicking a field goal. He had no less than two large feet, and a strong inclination toward kicking, and besides that he resembled a fellow we once knew out in Utah. Yes, we were for Mr. Parker first and last.

Not that we had anything against Mr. Brooks, however—no indeed! To be candid, we did not know a gentleman by that name even had a ticket of admission to the park, let alone playing in the game. He did not appear in the lineup as given out prior to the pastime—a line-up in which there were subsequently no less than seven changes before play commenced—and there seemed to be some disposition to keep his presence secret. Had we known he is the son of Belvidere Brooks, head of the Western Union, we would have been in his favor from the very beginning; for is it not the Western Union that takes our copy and sends it over the wires almost like it is written? It is so!

Then there was that Mr. Swartout. Rereading what we said about the game, we find we had no time for Mr. Swartout whatever. This seems strange to us now—quite strange—and we are hardly able to analyze our attitude in the premises.

Bike Stars Clash in 6-Day Grind

Everything is in readiness for the start of the six-day bicycle race at the Arena at 4 o'clock this afternoon and twenty of the best riders in the world await the starter's gun to send them away on the long grind.

The ten competing teams spent this morning in trying out the new saucer and pronounced it the fastest that they have ever rode on. Other preparations were attended to and the riders, after cleaning up their preliminary work, anxiously awaited the call of the starter.

There was some doubt as to whether Frank Cavanagh, the Irish champion, who is Jimmy Moran's partner in the race, would be able to start. He is not in the best of condition owing to injuries received at Newark. If he does not compete, Ernie Pye, who rode such a wonderful race with Perchicot, the Frenchman, and later with one of the Bedell brothers when his team was split because of injuries, will be Moran's partner.

Americans must look to their laurels this year, for never before has the army of invaders been so classy. At times we have had as many foreigners, but never has there been such a bunch of speedsters as Grenda, Hehir, McNamara, Corry, Spears and Kopsy.

There is a distinguished array of Americans, but after the showing of Grenda, McNamara and a few other visitors on Saturday night, the opinion is general that the Antipodeans have an excellent chance to win.

The race this year should be broken up by lap steals, as there are several strong teams capable of a hard road, but which have no chance with Grenda, who is fairly flying, and in a final sprint should walk away with it. Teams like McNamara and Root, Moran and Pye, Hill and Collins, Ryan and Cameron, and Lawrence and Magin have but one chance for the money, and that is a stolen lap.

Rodel-Reich Bout Is Called Off

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The Rodel-Reich bout arranged by the Fairmont A. C. for Wednesday night has been declared off, probably because of lack of interest due to the election. It is also said that Rodel didn't look upon Reich with favor as a drawing card.

Lipton Building Boat.

GOSPORT, England, Nov. 3.—Actual work of construction of the Shamrock IV with which Sir Thomas Lipton will attempt to lift the American cup, was begun today under the personal supervision of the yacht's designer, Charles Nicholson. The Shamrock IV. is expected to be launched in April.

Keep Looking Young

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

The secret of keeping young—is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver. Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities. You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, Ohio.

Voters of Massachusetts

As a candidate for Governor I ask you to go to the polls tomorrow. I hope that you will vote for me—but vote, anyway. Don't neglect your highest duty as a citizen!

You chose me Lieutenant-Governor last year, giving me 192,000 votes. I have tried to perform the duties of that office acceptably.

I am the candidate of the Democratic party, the free and unanimous selection of its voters in the primaries. I am a Democrat, but I am a citizen first of all. I aspire to serve all of the people in the Governorship.

I am a native born son of Massachusetts—her traditions and her honor are dear to me. I shall do my duty as Governor to the fullest measure of my abilities.

I neither control any great cororations, nor am I controlled by any. If I could not be a free and independent man in the office of Governor I should not seek it.

I have conducted a clean campaign, discussing measures rather than men.

I am opposed by three candidates. My financial resources are meagre and I cannot match their campaigns in expenditure. I favor legislation to put an end to the lavish use of money in influencing elections.

I am opposed to railroad monopoly in New England. I have always stood for advanced labor legislation. I support progressive measures.

I am in hearty sympathy with the policies of the national administration.

I appeal to you to vote for all of my associates on the Democratic ticket—they are worthy of your support.

Faithfully yours,

"YOU lie!"

The boy's face grew suddenly gray and old. Every nerve tingled with pain. A sob caught in his throat. Then he quivered to action like a horse about to run a race. His right arm shot out, directed by the bruised and tortured young mind urging on its muscles.

"You lie!"

The man smiled, but the smile masked a sneer. He caught the boy's wrist in a trained grasp.

"Don't be more of a young fool than Nature intended, Ken. What I just told you is town talk. And you might have hit me—and bruised your knuckles!"

He released his hold on the tense young fellow, and pulled an enamel cigarette case from an immaculate waistcoat pocket.

"Pipe of peace, Ken? Forgot what I said. All in the day's work. Have a drink? That's life, old chap."

The boy snarled. "That's life? It will be death to you, you cur!"

Then he lunged heavily toward his tormentor. Strong arms intervened. In a whirlwind of events and emotions, the boy found himself jammed with his hat and stick and dress-suit gloves and standing on the sidewalk outside his club. By his side was a family friend—a man his father's age.

"So they put me out!" said Ken dully. "Ejected from my club—that's what I was."

"Come—come, my lad. We could not have a fight in the club. Think of the scandal!"

"Scandal! My God, it isn't true—my father wouldn't——" the boy choked in helpless pain and rage.

"Come and have a drink, Ken," answered the family friend.

"Might as well. It will help me drown—that lie." said the boy with horrible growing fear that "the lie" was true.

The older man smiled a bit sadly. They found another club and had a drink. One drink—two, three, four, another. The boy lost count.

"Got to go home to the wife and kiddies. You may as well go home, too. Feel better now—eh, Ken?" said the family friend.

He was firm in his cups from long habit. His voice was quite steady.

"Home?" said the boy, not quite so steadily. "Home? Oh, the house on Seventy-third street. I'll go there later. Gotta a couple o' things to see to first."

"You're looking at things more sanely now. That's life, my boy. There's a skeleton in every closet—and that fool Ramsay opened the door of yours a bit wide. Bones aren't a pretty sight. But forget it, Ken," said the man who called himself a "family friend."

Forget it? Kenneth Nelson spent twenty-four hours trying to forget. But alcohol is a grim preservative, and the white-boned skeleton in his family cupboard grinned and gibbered by his side through all those twenty-four hours.

At last bodily exhaustion triumphed over mental horror—and Kenneth Nelson dragged his weary body back to "the house on Seventy-third street."

There was no one to welcome this sad young prodigal as with lurching step he staggered across the foyer hall to the great tapestry called the "living room."

THE SECRETARY

The room lay in dark shadow. The boy stood swaying in the doorway. His clothes were in wild disarray, and in his face was the wilder light of a disordered mind.

Darkness; then a click and light flooded the room. Mary Burk, Mrs. Nelson's pretty, brown-haired social secretary turned with her hand still on the tiny switch that knew how to lighten darkness.

"Kenneth!"

The girl started forward with feminine eagerness to greet her employer's son, but stopped as the realization of his condition came to her.

"Kenneth!" she spoke, sadly.

The boy caught at the back of the chair and stood smiling at her. Mary Burk was a pretty girl, and before her father died she had been the playmate of Ken and his sister Alice.

"Hello, Mary! Say, Mary, my first appearance today. Mother, say anything about it?"

"She was very much upset at your not coming," Mary spoke, coldly.

"Well, I would have come, but I was very much upset myself." The boy's sorrow had lost all dignity. Rum and dignity are not friends.

"Your father is here. He wants to see you."

The foolish smile died out of Kenneth's face. He stepped toward the girl and spoke angrily.

"I want to see him."

"No, Kenneth. No!" She caught his arm.

THE DRUNKEN BOY.

"Don't!" He shook her hand away.

"Don't! Don't touch me! It makes me nervous. Why shouldn't I talk to my—father?"

"Not now, Ken! Please! Oh, Ken! If he were to see you like this—it would break his heart."

"His heart? I guess not. He isn't such a saint."

The boy sneered—and the skeleton in the cupboard laughed its deathwhite bones, and laughed derisively.

"Your father!" cried Mary. She was ashamed—ashamed for the boy who was so bitterly dear to her.

"You're a girl, and you don't know, but it's a rotten world, rotten!"

"Kenneth! I have made my own place in the world for two years. That's more than you've ever done. It isn't a pleasant thing for me to live here—almost like a servant—when I was brought up with you and Alice, and when I see you, like this—I wish I had never come here."

"Say!" said the boy in slow wonder, "You're a pretty girl, Mary, prettier than any of 'em that have money."

He put his hand on her arm. The girl drew away proudly.

"Kenneth! Boy!! To see you degrade yourself like this—it's too hard!"

"You like me, don't you, Mary? Don't you?" insisted Ken, with rising feeling.

"You know I do," said Mary Burk, sadly.

"I like you too! I always—liked you! I used to call you my little sweetheart, when we were kids. I kissed you once. Do you remember?"

THE INSULT

In his fevered veins mad blood rioted and gounded from brain to heart and back again. He felt conscious of only one mad desire in all the world of cruel desires. He must take this slim, alluring slip of a girl in his arms. He must kiss her again. His voice took on a deep note—the call of primitive man to the woman he would possess.

"Kiss me now, Mary!"

"Kenneth." The girl spoke in torture. "Kenneth."

She was pleading for more than life. "I'm no fool."

His voice was hoarse with emotion—and drink. He would not be thwarted now. He seized her trembling arm. He drew the quivering girl closer—closer.

"I know you don't hate me."

She was in his arms now. He laughed in triumph.

"You don't hate me. And I—want you."

His lips sought hers.

"Kenneth!" commanded a stern voice.

The half-erased boy turned and faced—his father!

Kenneth Nelson's arms dropped suddenly from the cowering form of his prey. Shaken with sobs of shame and agony, Mary Burk stumbled from the room.

Then Charles Nelson walked grimly to his son, and spoke bitterly:

"Kenneth! I am not a society man. I know nothing of the code of your set. To be drunk is, I suppose, quite proper. It is also considered the part of a gentleman to insult a girl whose poverty has placed her in a dependent position in your own house?"

Shame for himself—unworthy son of an unworthy father—sobered the boy. He spoke abruptly.

THE BOY ASHAMED

"No. I'm ashamed of myself!"

"My boy!"

The father's manner changed—with real warmth of affection he put his hands on Kenneth's shoulders and looked at him.

"I am glad! My boy! Things can't be as bad as I feared. Can't you and I get together, Ken?"

"I'm all right," said the boy impatiently. "I've been drinking or I wouldn't have said a word like that to Mary Burk. It's not her fault. If things had been different she and I would have been married."

"Different? How—different?"

"Oh—she's no money and no social standing—no position now."

Charles Nelson snatched his hands from the boy's shoulders and stepped back in deep disgust.

"Good God!" said the father.

"Pooh! Nice row there would be if I wanted to marry Mary Burk. Mrs. Charles Nelson, leader of society, has other plans for her only son! You needn't look at me like that. Mother had it out with her six months ago."

"Your mother told this girl that? Your mother, the servants tell me, is in her boudoir, dressing for 'the dinner of the season.' Mary Burk, as well born as any of us, is probably crying her heart out—in the servants' quarters."

"Yes," said the boy with callous indifference.

"Yes! And still, knowing all this, you drugged that girl into your arms! You cur! I'd like to thrash you!"

"Don't talk to me like that!" cried Kenneth, in anger. "I know too much."

"You know too little, Kenneth, too little. It's because I haven't talked to you like that; because I was weak enough to allow your mother to shield you and spoil you, that you are what you are today. I knew five years ago that I ought to put you to work. I should have taught you to help me grind out dollars."

THE EXPOSE

"Without going to college?" sneered Ken.

"In five years I might have taught you what your college didn't teach you—the meaning of the word 'Man.'"

"Oh, I was wrong. I'm sorry. I said so once. That's enough."

"This sort of thing is going to stop! You will turn what you get after this. And as long as you live in my house you will conduct yourself as my son!"

"That is what I have been doing this afternoon."

"What do you mean?"

"What right have you to nag me for following the example that's all around me? For you, business and other occupations. You come home—when you happen to be passing."

"Kenneth!"

"This is a fine home, isn't it? It costs you so much to run—homes—that you need my help."

"Kenneth," said the man sadly, "Kenneth, when this was a home, I used to run it for less than the present florist's bills. I used to have some one to pour out my coffee and sew on my buttons. I used to have two servants working for me. Now I work to support twelve servants. That's success! I'm a great man. I read an account of it in today's paper. I am the husband of Mrs. Charles Nelson."

The man forgot he was speaking to his son—a wayward boy—and the pent-up bitterness of his lonely soul, of manhood denied, crept into his very voice.

"Stop that!" cried the boy.

The man went on:

"Thank God, Alice is going to get out. She'll marry Tom Hardhat—who loves her—and have a home of her own."

"Stop that! Don't you dare blame mother. That's what you're doing. And she's worth a million like me—or you!"

"You're drunk!"

THE SKELETON.

"Yes—I'm drunk! Do you know why? Because I'm ashamed! It's a fine thing to be a man's son and hear what I heard last night! That's why I didn't come home. I'm no good. I know that. If I was I'd take my mother out of this place tonight!"

Around a curve of the stairway came Mrs. Nelson—regal, glorious, dressed for the "dinner of the season." Her whole heart seemed bent on arranging some folds of tulle that nestled against her white bosom.

"What are you saying?" cried Nelson.

Neither man nor boy had been attracted by the soft footfall of the beautiful woman who was advancing with unconscious steadiness to her doom!

The boy spoke up with the pent-up bitterness of his day of pain. The man listened with the restrained agony of years of shame.

"I know why things are so rotten here. I wouldn't believe it until I had to—you're running a flat on Ninety-fifth street."

As he spoke his mother had reached the foot of the stairs. The raised voices woke her from her study of her own beauty. She listened.

"You're running a flat on Ninety-fifth street?"

At last she managed to descend the awful last step between her stairway of revelation and the room.

"Kenneth!"

There was a moment of stricken silence. One long moment. Two men nerved themselves to meet the woman. She turned to her husband.

"Charlie!"

"Kenneth is"—the man began, his voice husky with emotion.

"I've been drinking, mother."

"Yes, I know. Gentlemen drink, but they do not lie." She appealed imperiously to Nelson. "Is my son a liar?"

"Emily?" The cry sounded from the man's shamed and tortured soul.

"Is he?" insisted Emily Nelson.

"Yes," said Kenneth.

"—no," acknowledged his father.

"Then what he said is true?"

"Yes."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

OCT. 10.—The heart specialist has come and gone, and Dr. Gray came and went with him. They looked me over profoundly, and talked to each other wisely, and advised me sagely.

Then they took the nurse aside, and talked to her in solemn tones; but if they thought that this mysterious conclave worried me they were mistaken.

I am quite ready to go at any time. My only fear would be for Manette, but with Richards and Sally Spencer to mother her, there is no reason why her future should have more than the usual clouds in it. She is provided for; everyone I know and love is provided for, and, Diary, I am very tired.

It is a tired heart; that is the whole trouble. It is not weak, as they think; only tired.

Oct. 11.—There is no tyrant in the world, so great as the man whose heart may at any moment go back on him.

"Sh!" his women folk say when he is unreasonable. "We must let him have his way; his heart is weak."

"It won't do to cross him too much," his business associates grumble, "unless we want to have a dead man on our hands."

A woman is even a greater tyrant. I once knew a woman whose heart used to skip a beat about once every ten years or so, but she made so much of that skipped beat that her father was kept poor letting her have her way, and her husband subsisted to meet her demands for money and finally killed himself. And she outlived two more husbands!

The manner in which I had my own way the first week after the heart specialist was here amused me. Now it bores me to death.

The architect was the only one who would disagree with me, and he left for town yesterday.

We go tomorrow. It is time Manette were in school, and the trees are beginning to look so mournful that I don't like to look at them. Then the heart specialist wants me where he can look at me occasionally.

What a pity pudding for the specialists every millionaire finally becomes!

Oct. 15.—We are back at home once more, and it seemed very nice to get here. I had a feeling when I crossed my three hold that every chair in the room was stretching out welcoming arms; that the glad feeling that I had returned was not confined to the servants.

Tompkins went up North for us. He thought he could be of some service on the journey, and he was, and my big limousine waited for us at the station.

I liked the manner in which the pretty little nurse seemed to enjoy the luxury of it, but I liked more than that her prior consideration of us. It was not till she had seen that I was comfortable that she settled down in quiet enjoyment of the ride. She enjoyed it so much that a ride has become part of her daily program; sometimes with me and sometimes without me, but, no matter when, or with whom she goes, she no longer wears her Salvation Army clothes.

I kept my word, and Richards has selected her clothes with an appreciative regard of what is best suited to her color and her hair without taking any note of the cost.

I have put Manette in the public schools. The decision was not without long consideration, and many talks with Richards. I don't want the child to become a snob, and that is what the private schools make a business of turning out. The private schools, moreover, are no refuge for slow-brained children, who can't keep abreast of those of their age, and Manette is not that kind.

Tompkins waits at the school gates when school is dismissed and, rain or shine, no matter what the weather, the journey to and from school must be made on foot. Her little classmates may catch glimpses of her riding around town in a limousine with her nurse at her side, but they will never see it except by accident.

And her school clothes! For once I had my way. The dainty little garments from Paris may be put on when she reaches home, but she wears common little cotton gowns to school like those worn by children of our butcher. I want her to always know that her wealth and station are mere accidents, and that it is possible to be happy without either.

Oct. 16.—There came to me today, Diary, a letter from Sally Spencer in Paris, which has caused me to spend most of the day in reflection. She has left a decision with me, forgetting that no man is noble enough to decide any question honorably in which his own happiness is involved.

William F. Kirk Tells About:

The Manicure Lady

"THAT playwright fellow that I was telling you about is making a decided impression on me, George," declared the Manicure Lady. "I was out to dine with him last night and had the delightfulest time! He didn't take me to no bohemian place that smelled of sour cheese and phony claret. We went right, George. We was to one of the swellest cafes in this busy little community, and I felt kind of proud to notice how the head waiter stood around all the time we was there. Nearly everybody seemed to know him, too. Folks at the other tables kept looking over at us and whispering, and for a moment my girlish pride began to falter. I wondered if I was got up tacky in some of the details of my dress, but after a little I heard one of them telling how famous the playwright was, and after that I threw out my chin and acted like some orchids myself. I guess I wasn't the worst looking lily there at that."

"I'll bet you had it on all of them," said the admiring Head Barber. "Now, if that genius will only stop writing plays long enough to take you to some Little Church Around the Corner maybe you won't be some swell little lady for him to take along dining."

"It looks like that very thing is likely to happen," said the Manicure Lady, "but neither one of us is in no hurry. He says that he wants to finish three more plays, and then we can get married and have our honeymoon in Europe. He sure does know how to order a dinner. I was reading once that knowing how to order a dinner is one of the surest marks of a gent."

"Then I guess I ain't a gent," said the Head Barber. "I think knowing how to order a dinner is less important than knowing how to have the price. I remember one time me and the Missus took a married couple, friends of ours, to dinner at a swell layout and I was kind of lost about how to order. I was just going to sugar the head waiter and have him help me out, but the husband of my wife's lady friend was right there on the job. He ordered everything from soup to nuts, and he sure was thorough about it. The size of the dinner check made the goose flesh come on me a little, but I am a good loser and I paid it as if I had just sold a gold mine out West. I felt kind of cheap at the time to think this fellow had it on me for restaurant manners, but when we got home the Missus made me feel better by telling me that all he knew was how to order things and let other people pay for them. He asked us out to dinner once after that, and took us up to a little dump where the dinner was fifty cents, including a pint of wine, and when the check came he said, 'Let's us Dutch it.' After that I felt kind of superior to him, even if I don't know how to order swell dinners."

"This friend of mine don't make no fuss about ordering and you needn't compare him to that cheap skate of which you was just speaking of," said the Manicure Lady. "He was just grand, the way he did everything. But I suppose any genius knows all about them things."

"I don't think so," said the Head Barber. "I have read about some geniuses that didn't know how to order a dinner and who ate so seldom that they almost forgot how to hold the tools. Maybe he ain't enough of a genius to ever go hungry."

"Maybe not," said the Manicure Lady, "but he is the finest gent to go eating with that I have ever saw."

Give Food Lessons in the Schools, Says Cassidy

Mr. Cassidy calls the attention of parents today to the power the schools can exert for pure food. Teachers' associations are alive to this question. At a recent convention of the Norfolk County Teachers' Association, Dr. C. Houston Goudiss of Philadelphia, a pure food champion, spoke on this subject. Mr. Cassidy tells you of Dr. Goudiss' conclusions.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

"What can the schools do to help in the crusade for pure food?" asked Dr. C. Houston Goudiss, a pure food champion of Philadelphia of the Norfolk County teachers.

The schools can do everything.

They can extend their social work and learn more intimately of the homes from which the children come. HOW MUCH they get to eat and WHAT they get to eat.

This generation has accepted the theory of the sound mind in the sound body. But our practices and instructions are slow in making this theory practical.

The schools are the logical centres for the dissemination of the knowledge of food products. It is not difficult to organize an educational food show where specimens of food and charts explaining food values should be displayed.

Honest and dishonest food labels could be shown. Methods of adulteration could be explained. False weights and measures could be exhibited.

Important Education.

Once organized, such a food exhibition could travel from school to school at small expense. This is more important education than the traveling library or art gallery.

A good piece of work for the school exhibit is to teach the children how they can extract the colors from penny candies. They can then dye ribbons and rags. Such work brings food lessons home most forcefully.

Or take, say, four hens, to show the effect of denatured foods, foods the life has been processed out of to please the eye and cheat the stomach.

Feed No. 1 on a diet of whole wheat, No. 2 on nothing but natural brown rice, another should be fed on hulled wheat, the fourth to be given ordinary white polished rice.

Give a certain weighed quantity and weigh the hens each day. The results will speak for themselves. In one experiment of this kind at a recent food fair, the hens fed on natural whole wheat and natural rice gained in weight and laid eggs.

The other two which had received the hulled wheat and polished rice laid no eggs and lost weight steadily.

Schools Can Help.

A big chart suspended above the coop showing the weight of the hens each day proves a popular and interesting exhibit.

Children could be taught the differences between good and bad eggs and to avoid cheaply made and viciously adulterated soda waters.

We have laid too much stress on the intellect, too little on the body and the health. We have produced a large crop of criminals, defectives and diseased.

We are appalled at the situation and are trying as never before to readjust ourselves. The food and health crusade is the most important issue we have to consider.

The schools can help. They should help to reduce this great army of inefficiency. The gospel of our generation is health. You parents can demand this gospel be taught properly to your children, the future fathers and mothers and citizens.

Beauty

Perfect arms and shoulders, and other valuable hints from Cecelia Santon

Miss Santon's Beautiful Arms and Shoulders

CECELIA SANTON and I met in a manager's office. All about us were quartered oak and heavy carpets, and all the unattractive paraphernalia of utility and business. Little atmosphere or charm for the beautification of a dainty girl—and yet from the dull work-a-day environment little Miss Cecelia shone with the splendor of youth and health and the clean sweetness of modest girlhood.

Miss Santon was the little prima donna of "Arcadia" last Spring, but now she is intrepidly venturing out on the vaudeville circuit alone, with full faith in her voice, her public and her manager. "Don't you think," she asked, "that if a girl is ready to give affection to the world, it must like her a little bit too?"

"You open a field for our discussion," answered the always-ready-for-business interviewer, "we can discuss the beauty of being in sympathy with the world—of being in tune with life."

"Perhaps I have not thought about it very philosophically. But I think you have to keep yourself well and in good condition and free from tiredness or nervousness or brain fag. It does not do to be forever making excuses for not being quite at your best—you have to make it your business to be at your best. I think a young girl who is trying to accomplish anything in the world, whether it is in the line of work or just winning a reputation as a beauty, has to keep right at the thing she is striving for and never lose sight of what she wants. I guess earnestness of purpose would be my rule of success."

ARMS AND SHOULDERS

"Now you can answer your own question. Earnestness of purpose means giving the world the best you have—and, as the poem says, 'the best shall come back to you.' But now won't you tell me about your best in the line of beauty? Suppose you tell all your anxious readers how to gain or keep beautiful white arms and shoulders."

"I sacrifice a lot to keep white skin," said Miss Cecelia. "I love the outdoors and I believe in fresh air and sunshine for all growing things, but I have to guard my skin against the sunshine I love so dearly. On hot Summer days I always wear a big shade hat, for though Summer tan may look attractive while it lasts, it leaves a coarser and slightly less white skin in its wake. Burn and tan every Summer for five or six years and gradually your skin will lose its fine white texture. I am a firm believer in good cold cream; if I suspect a little tan of having won its way to my face or throat or hands, I immediately dose the offending member in cold cream. At night I always cleanse my skin thoroughly according to the following method: First, I apply a generous coating of cold cream, which I rub in thoroughly; next comes a washing in a thick lather made of hot water, castile soap and a few drops of benzoin to make the water soft and pleasing to the skin. A bit of massage with the finger tips and a dash of cold water or a rubbing with ice to make the tissues firm and healthy, and my face, neck, arms and shoulders are cleansed for the night.

SIMPLE EXERCISES

"Then I take a few simple exercises for arms and shoulders and throat. With the fingers straight and together, I raise the arms straight up above my head, then sink them to shoulder height, and then turning the wrist so that the palms are outward and lead, I stretch the arms wide apart at shoulder height. Count ten for each part of the exercise and alternately inhale and exhale. Swinging very light Indian clubs is a good arm and shoulder exercise, but the best one I know for burning off surplus fat from the regions of the shoulders and making shapely the upper arm is this: Grasp the shoulder lightly with finger tips and thumb, in this position swing the arms around in circles, increasing gradually to 100 counts, and stretching the neck from side to side with each ten counts.

"Simple food and not too much of it—fresh vegetables and fruits and salads and light meats with no rich sauces—aid and abet me in keeping my shoulders shapely and free from an accumulation of fat. It isn't easy to keep in trim—but that quotation of yours expresses it—'give to the world the best you have and the best shall come back to you.'"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU MUST MAKE FRIENDS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady eighteen years of age and have no friend (lady or gentleman)—the only one I associate with is my sister, who is seventeen. I do not like to dance or go with any strange men, although I had a number of requests while at affairs, and I would not answer any one who speaks to me on the street, etc. I would like to get acquainted with a nice young man in a decent way.

CONSTANT READER.

YOU are right in refusing to encourage the advances of strangers, but surely you have some friends who could introduce you. Can you not trust in them to this extent? Be a little friendly with their friends and they will not be strangers long.

ASK HIM TO CALL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and some time ago met a young man who has taken me out to several places of amusement. The last time we were out together he hurt my feelings, but as he apologized, I forgave him.

He still thought I was angry with him, however, and when he was leaving me he said he thought I would not go out with him again, and as I did not answer him he did not ask me again.

MURIEL.

YOUR past association entitles you to the privilege of asking him to call. I am sure if he is learning to care for you that he will accept and that explanations and a reconciliation will follow.

HE IS NOT TOO OLD

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and am keeping company with a gentleman who is almost thirty. He is very serious and does not want me to go out with any other boys. He has told me he loves me and often asks me if I care for him. Is he too old for me and do you think I ought to give up all my younger friends for him, as he is out of town most of the time?

GRAY EYES.

HE is not a day too old for you, and there are many reasons why he is desirable.

He is serious. Remember, my dear, that these young boys are not.

The giving up of the boy friends to whom he objects will prove no sacrifice if you love him. Unless you love him you wrong him and yourself by considering him a moment.

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

BY LOUIS TRACY

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

TODAY'S INSTALMENT.

Copyright, 1904, by Edward J. Clode.

"BUT he is in love with her. At first both Mrs. Atherley and the girl kept him at arm's length. She was too poor, he too rich. That difficulty was smoothed over quite recently, and they meet now nearly every day. Langdon hasn't a dog's chance, and if all goes well the happy pair will soon be off to Norway or Switzerland for their honeymoon."

"Oh, indeed. Then where does all your clever scheming come in? Why have you held me back? He went to Sussex. You wouldn't let me follow him. He was out late several nights on his motor car along the North Road. I would have met him and smashed his face in with a life preserver, but you held me back. What are you driving at? What's your game?"

"You shall see."

Grenier went to a cupboard and took out a small box. From this he produced a single check and several slips of paper, on which were written names and signatures.

"That is an old check signed by Philip Anson," he said coolly. "Here is his signature repeated several times for amusement. It only needs a man of action like you, an accomplished actor like myself, to possess the necessary nerve—the nerve that risks all on a supreme coup—and we will not only be rolling in money but able to enjoy life pleasantly in any part of the world we select—even in London when the wind changes a little."

"You must talk plainly if you want me to understand you," said Mason doggedly.

"Very well. You think I am somewhat like Philip Anson at this moment."

"His image, confound him!"

"No, not his image. I would not humbug his friends. I might puzzle them for a moment, at a distance, but let them speak with me and I am done. It is sufficient that I resemble him. But the handwriting; that is good?"

THE PLOT

"First class."

"There I agree with you. My skill in that direction has been admitted by three bank clerks and an Old Bailey judge. And now for the coup. If you intend to kill this young gentleman you may as well kill him to our mutual advantage. There is no gain in being hanged for him unnecessarily, eh?"

Mason glared at him in silence.

"I see I must keep to the point. We must, by some means, inveigle him to a place where you can work your sweet pleasure on him. Ah, that interests you. It must be known that he is going to that place. It must be quite certain that he leaves it."

"Leaves it!"

"Yes, I, Philip Anson the second, will leave it. I will lay my plans quite surely. I will even telegraph my movements to his fiancee and to his agent, Abingdon, who used to be stipendiary magistrate at Clerkenwell. Now, don't interrupt. You spoil my train of thought. Philip Anson will live again for days after you have—er—disposed of him. By that time you will have established such an alibi that an archangel's testimony would not shake it. Then Philip Anson will disappear, vanish into thin air, and with him a hundred thousand or more of his own money, some in gold, but mostly in notes, which will have been changed so often as to defy anyone to trace them. As a precautionary measure, he will go out of his way to annoy or insult the young lady whom he intends to make his wife, and that alone will supply an explanation, of a sort, for his wish to conceal his movements. With proper management Philip Anson should leave the map without exciting comment for weeks after he is dead, and when the weeks grow into months people will class his disappearance with the other queer mysteries familiar to everyone who reads the newspapers. Neat, isn't it?"

"Too neat. You can't do it."

"Have you evolved the idea? Who runs the greatest risk, the man who strikes one blow and hides a disfigured corpse or he who calmly faces hundreds of men and says he is Philip Anson?"

"I don't care about risk, but if it comes to that I suppose you are the more likely to be found out."

"Thank you. You see my way at last. In any event, you are safe. Even suppose I am discovered, will I split on you? Will I add a charge of murder to one of forgery? Not much! I tell you the scheme is workable, not by timid bunglers, but by clever men. I admit I haven't the nerve to kill anybody, nor would I care to suggest this present arrangement to an accomplice merely to make money. But if you are resolved to end Philip Anson's earthly pilgrimage, I can't prevent you, but I fail to see any reason why I shouldn't profit by the transaction."

"What about me when the thing is done?"

"Oh, you are beginning to appreciate the other side of events. Now, we will assume that Philip Anson has been dead a couple of months, and Victor Grenier has amassed a fortune by a sheer run of luck on the turf. It is fairly evident that Victor Grenier must divvy with Jocky Mason, or the latter can make the world too hot to hold him, even if an old friend were unkind enough to refuse to disgorge unless under pressure."

Mason's brows wrinkled in thought. The project sounded plausible enough. Determined as he was to wreak his vengeance on Philip, Grenier's ingenious idea not only offered him a reliable means of escape, but promised a rich harvest of wealth. Certainly it was worth trying. Not once but many times during the preceding month Grenier had withheld the murderer's willing hand. When it did fall what keener satisfaction could he have than the knowledge that he would be enriched by the deed?

"I can't see ahead like you," said Mason at last, "but I will obey orders. You tell me where and when; I will be there."

Grenier shifted his feet uneasily.

"I don't quite mean that," he said. "I will acquaint you with certain facts on which you may rely absolutely. I will forthwith set myself on the assumption that the real Philip Anson won't interfere with me. That is all."

The other man guffawed most unpleasantly. This sophistry did not appeal to him.

"Put it any way you like," he said. "You can depend on me for my part of the bargain."

"And you can be quite certain that in a very little while we need not trouble our active wits any further as to the wherewithal to enjoy life. I have thought this idea out in all its bearings. It simply can't fail. Come, let us drink to a glorious future."

He reached for a decanter, but a sudden knock at the door jarred the nerves of both men considerably.

"See who is there," whispered Grenier, whose face showed white through the paint and grease it bore.

"What about you in that rigout?" growled the stronger ruffian.

BAD LUCK

"I will slip into my bedroom. Quick! See who it is."

Langdon entered.

"Where's Victor?" he said eagerly.

"In his room; he will be here in a moment. What's the matter? You look pretty glum."

"I've had a piece of wretched luck. I was at Mrs. Atherley's 'at home' today, when Anson turned up. I met him without winking, but he knew me at once. He called me outside and treated me like a dog."

"He did, eh?"

"Yes. It was no good trying to bluff him. Only on the guarantee that I would never meet Miss Atherley again would he consent not to expose me. I'm done. My last chance is gone. I have wasted my money on Grenier's mad notions, and was fool enough to think you meant what you said when you vowed to have Anson's life."

Grenier, who heard every word, reappeared.

"Does Philip Anson know that Mr. James Crichton Langdon is Sir Philip Morland's stepson?" he asked.

"I can't tell. What does it matter, anyhow?"

"Think, man, think! Does he even know your name?"

"He can easily find out."

"Not he! This young spark has a fine sense of honor. You promised to keep away from the lady in future. He will never even mention you. And your money is not lost. It has been well spent, every farthing. Take care Miss Evelyn does not see you until she is heartbroken about Philip Anson. She will be; you can be quite sure of it. Then your opportunity will come."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Resinol Soap

for a clear complexion

PIMPLES and blackheads disappear, unsightly complexions become clean, clear, and velvety, and hair healthy and beauty are promoted by the regular use of Resinol Soap and an occasional application of Resinol Ointment. These soothing, healing preparations do their work easily, quickly and at little cost, when even the most expensive cosmetics and complicated "beauty treatments" fail.

All druggists sell Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. For trial size of each, write to Dept. 17-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

MORGAN'S WILL SHOWED HIS FAITH IN SERVICES GIVEN BY THE TRUST COMPANY

The Boston AMERICAN publishes today and will publish on successive Mondays, articles on "The Trust Company and Its Activities." The articles will deal particularly with the relations of trust companies to the business communities, and will also give detailed information of value to investors. Every investor should read these articles, the fourth of which appears today.

Lessons From Mr. Morgan's Will

How America's Greatest Financier Made Provision for the Administration of His Estate—Avoided Too Heavy a Burden on Trustees—Although Son and Other Members of Family Are Executors a Trust Company May Be Substituted

Pride of family, prudence manifested in the minute direction as to the disposal of his very large estate, and a compelling sense of responsibility concerning those things which are heavenly, are the distinguishing elements of the will of J. P. Morgan.

The attention of the business men of the country in general and more especially the interest of bankers, however, have been focussed on one of the features of this remarkable man's very notable last testament, which seems to have been a product of his second and, perhaps, his more reflective judgment.

It was quite natural that a man, to whom family tradition and descent were so dear, should entrust the carrying out of his specifically expressed wishes to his son and to other members of his family, yet one of the after provisions of his will has a very significant section which is illustrative, not alone of the perfect confidence that can be reposed in a trust company, but which demonstrates that one of the most prudent and astute financiers of his era resorted to a trust company proviso, as if to clinch, bind and cement the carefully planned and explicitly stated authority vested in his will. This notable section reads as follows:

Care in Direction.

"Notwithstanding the foregoing provision that there shall always be three executors and trustees under this my will, if at any time my said executors and trustees shall be unanimously of opinion that it is better for the interests of my estate that a trust company in the city of New York, authorized by law to execute trusts, shall be appointed sole trustee under this my will, either of all or of any one or more of the separate trusts herein established, then and in that event I authorize my said executors and trustees, by a proper instrument in writing, executed by all of them, to appoint such trust company as they shall select to be sole trustee of any one or more of the trusts under this my will, and I hereby give and grant unto such trust company and unto each and every individual who shall be appointed as above provided successor to either of my said executors or trustees, all the rights, powers and authority, discretionary or otherwise, in this my will given to or conferred upon the executors and trustees herein named."

Will Have Great Weight.

Familiar with the uncertainties of life, cognizant of the inevitable intervention of death, Mr. Morgan in this apparently supplemental paragraph summed up the total of his business experience in so far as it related to the disposition of estates by will. If the executors and trustees, in their combined judgment and wisdom, decide that a trust company can better administer this estate, then such a course may be pursued—and evidently with assurance that the great banker himself was not willing to say such a course would not be the better.

This is the meaning of the paragraph, which may be no more than a suggestion, but that it will have great weight with his executors and trustees cannot be doubted. No more convincing testimonial to the value of trust companies can be devised than this brief section from a will which disposes of one of the country's largest estates.

Benefactions, practically in perpetuity, are included, intricate provisions are set forth, problems to test legal minds are involved; and, as though realizing that the task may prove too vast or too exacting for individuals, Mr. Morgan in a single paragraph offers what to his mind seemed a solution for whatever administrative burden the executors found too hard. Had he searched for years to discover a means to testify to the peculiarly valuable facilities which trust companies offer no better testimonial could be found.

A Gigantic Sum.

In drawing attention to this phase of trust company service it, perhaps, is new information to many to learn that the trust companies of the United States have no less than $30,000,000,000 of trust funds in their possession—a sum so gigantic as to be almost startling to the layman's mind. When it is stated further that the trust companies have five additional billions in their banking departments the proof is indisputable that the nation's wealth is wisely guarded.

Safely guarded it is, too, for not a dollar of trust funds given over to the keeping of a trust company has been lost through the company's or any officer's dishonesty, lack of judgment or carelessness, a record as worthy as it is remarkable, and attesting in the fullest degree the skill and the intelligence which the hundreds of trust companies the country over are bringing to bear in the constantly increasing responsibilities which the discerning public is placing upon them.

STOCK MARKET AND LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks opened lower and were still weak by afternoon. In the last half of the day losses in Boston included Boston & Maine 2¾, New Haven 1⅝, Boston Elevated 1, United Fruit 3⅝, Calumet and Arizona 1 and Osceola 2. American Telephone, Alaska Gold, Butte & Superior, Granby and North Butte were fractionally lower. Quincy was up a point.

The largest declines in New York included Canadian Pacific 1½, Southern Pacific 1¼, Union Pacific 1⅛, Reading 1⅛, Steel ¾, Amalgamated 1⅛, American Smelting 1, St. Paul 1, Western Union 1, California Petroleum 2 and Mexican Petroleum 7.

Stocks Weakened at Start.

Stock markets in this country and in London opened weaker, those on this side of the water being affected by the declines in the other. British traders are alarmed by reports that this country is preparing for armed intervention south of the Rio Grande, and that Mexicans are making ready to defend their capital and are seeking a war loan abroad. The Mexican situation was also an adverse factor in New York. It was not the only one. Wall Street saw in Attorney-General McReynolds' attitude towards International Harvester an indication of what course the administration will take next year towards great corporations in general.

The bank statement of Saturday exercised bear suasion and money was firmer. A cablegram to Hearst newspapers from Berlin read: "Bankers regard the export of German gold to London and New York as probable. The Reichsbank is also selling New York exchange to forestall gold movement."

More Reasons for Decline.

There were other reasons, including contraction of trade and the poor showing railroads are making as to net earnings, to account for additional pressure upon stocks when the market opened. Prices of the leading speculative issues receded a point or more. Mexican Petroleum was a weak specialty, declining as low as 48¼, off 8¼, in the first hour.

Directors of that company were to have acted on the dividend at Los Angeles on Saturday, but the meeting was adjourned for lack of quorum. It is reported that a meeting will be held in New York within a few days, and it is expected that the dividend will be passed. It is said that the company has the money to pay a dividend on common stock, but doubts if it be wise to make such a distribution because of the disturbed condition of affairs in Mexico. War would seriously affect the corporation's operations. California Petroleum weakened in sympathy.

There was a slight rally in New York during the morning, but losses were only partially recovered and markets were weak at midday and later. Stop orders upon a number of stocks were caught.

Call Money at 6 Per Cent.

Call money loaned and renewed at 6 per cent. on the New York Stock Exchange during the morning, with the National City, First National and some other large down-town banks out of the market. By afternoon the rate had declined to 4 per cent. As to time funds, sixty day, ninety day and four months, bids were 5 per cent. against 5 and 5¼ on Friday and five and six months bids were 4¾ against 4¾ and 5 per cent. previously.

It was wired from Washington that the Senate Banking Committee could not report a Currency bill before November 17 at the earliest and that everybody except a few administration men had abandoned hope of any measure being passed at this session of Congress. No change in the European money situation was reported, but it is believed that this country is in a more favorable position on the whole that the rest of the world. During last week the Bank of Germany's cash holdings decreased 77,593,000 marks. Berlin passed through a severe strain at the settlement period.

Boston and New York markets were both dull, and that was true also of the ones in Europe. There is no demand of consequence for securities anywhere.

New Haven went to a new low record during the morning, both in this city and in New York. Locally it touched 80; in New York it sold at 80¼.

The United States Supreme Court handed down a number of decisions interesting to financiers, but none affecting the stock market.

Copper Statistics Without Influence.

There was heavy selling of copper warrants in the London market by important houses and when foreign statistics were published, showing how copper supplies had decreased nearly a 1,000 tons within a fortnight, the market got no better support. In this country large selling interests continued to quote 16¾ cents a pound for electrolytic, but it was reported from London that small dealers there are offering the metal at the rate of 16.70 cents. But producers are holding as firmly to their price abroad as in this country.

Copper Warrants Slumped in London

Copper warrants slumped at the morning call in London, spot and futures being off £1 2s. 6d. each. At the close spot was £1 15s., still lower, and futures 12s. 6d. Sales were 700 tons of spot and 2,900 of futures.

Fortnightly foreign statistics show that European stocks of copper, including those at Hamburg, Rotterdam and Bremen, had decreased 1,400 tons on October 31, while copper supplies afloat had increased 450, making the net decrease abroad in the visible supply 950 tons. The visible supply was 25,827 tons, compared with 26,777 on October 15 last.

Nevada Douglas production for September was 426,101 pounds of copper from a shipment of 6,983,189 pounds of ore. August production was 364,780 pounds. At 16¾ cents a pound, the company had a gross income of $71,371 for the month, an increase of $10,941 compared with August.

Financial News in Brief.

The gross revenue of the Erie road increased $18,328 in September and operating income decreased $395,090.

In 1909, the Census Bureau reports, starch and glucose made in this country was valued at $48,799,316, an increase of $16,149,475 since 1904. There were 118 manufacturers in 1909 and they employed 5,827 persons and $38,866,419 capital.

Gross earnings of the Boston & Worcester Street Railway for the month of October amounted to $49,606, a decrease of $4,547 or 8%, as compared with the corresponding month of last year.

The Boston bank statement shows that excess reserve decreased $481,000 and excess with reserve agents decreased $2,774,000.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT — POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

To the Voters of Norfolk County
A PLAIN STATEMENT OF FACTS.

In 1895 a youth of sixteen, J. Raphael McCoole, began work in the office of the Register of Probate in Dedham. For ten years he was a clerk, during this decade studying law, and eight years ago he was appointed Assistant Register by Judge Flint. Thus Mr. McCoole has had eighteen years training to fit him for the office of Register of Probate, now that Mr. Cobb declines to serve longer. He is a Republican, but the office is strictly non-political, and so all parties nominated him for the primaries. But he had an opponent on the Republican ticket whose name begins with C, so probably all voters who knew neither candidate cast their vote for the first name that came alphabetically. As proof of this, in the town of Sharon, the home of Alonzo B. Cook, his opponent, Mr. McCoole carried by a vote of nearly two to one. Mr. McCoole also carried his own home town of Dedham by a vote of nearly three to one, and it is safe to say that had they been known throughout the County as they are in their home towns the result at the primaries would have been reversed.

Mr. McCoole represents both the Democratic and Progressive parties. He also has the endorsement of the Norfolk County Bar Association, regardless of party, and the majority of the Republican Town Committees urge his election. His opponent is inexperienced in knowledge and practice of probate law, yet he aspires to an office which demands as much knowledge of probate law as a Probate Judge possesses. Such an aspirant is as rash as he is presumptuous. Those who do probate business in Norfolk County know the man to deal with is the one whose courtesy has been unfailing during the eighteen years he has served in the Register's Office.

MONDAY, NOV. 3

$1000 WAITING FOR YOU!

If you jump into the fight now, and enter the AMERICAN'S picture puzzle contest. Four thousand dollars in prizes and a capital prize of $1,000.

The publication of pictures in the contest began September 21. You can get all back pictures at the AMERICAN office. The pictures represent authors and their books, poets, plays, proverbs, battles, universities, inventors, actors, cities, buildings and public men and women. One hundred and fifty-five competitors will receive prizes. Each week in the Sunday AMERICAN is printed a list of names and titles among which appear the answers to that week's puzzles.

You can get back numbers NOW. Start in and have as good a chance as those who began in the beginning. Get back issues at the American Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square.

SPECIAL NOTICE

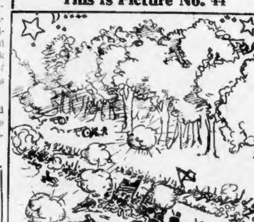

For the convenience of those who have missed any of the regular issues, all back puzzle pictures and weekly answer lists may be obtained at the regular price of the paper in which said pictures or answer lists appeared, viz., one cent for each daily back picture and five cents for each Sunday back picture or answer list.

Glance down the prize list and get busy right now—today, for the big $1,000 cash prize.

Rub Rheumatic, Aching Joints

Rub Pain Away With a Small Trial Bottle of Old "St. Jacobs Oil"

Rheumatism is "pain only."

Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging! Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" directly upon the "tender spot" and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and can not burn the skin.

Limber up! Quit complaining! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in just a moment you'll be free from rheumatic pain, soreness and stiffness. Don't suffer! Relief and a cure awaits you. "St. Jacobs Oil" is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains and swellings.

LARGEST NET PAID CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

Here Are the Names of the Democratic Traitors Who Are Seeking Re-election and Have Dodged the Question Whether They Will Be Faithful to Their Party Platform DEFEAT THEM

There are a number of men running on the Democratic ticket for the Legislature who last year deliberately violated their party platform by voting to surrender to the New Haven Railroad the street railways in more than half of Massachusetts. In the interests of the Democratic party, in the interests of David I. Walsh, the Democratic candidate for Governor, these men ought to be defeated.

Directly after these men betrayed their party and the State by their vote in favor of the railroad, Lieutenant-Governor Walsh publicly denounced them at the celebration in Charlestown on Bunker Hill Day in the presence of Colonel Roosevelt.

This is what Mr. Walsh said:

There is a thought I want to leave with you tonight, and that is in connection with those men in public life who betrayed their pledges to the people. SUCH MEN OUGHT TO BE DRIVEN FROM PUBLIC LIFE.

This government of ours is a government of, for and by the people. But the masses are not satisfied nowadays about the truth of this statement. They follow closely the doings of their public officials, those who serve them as Representatives, Senators, etc., while in office, and find them catering to the interests of a select few.

It is up to the citizens of this country and of this Commonwealth to see to it that those men who are siding with the capitalists against the masses ARE DRIVEN FROM PUBLIC LIFE.

Within a month Mr. Walsh, in a public statement, declared that men who violated their party platform "ARE GUILTY OF THE HIGHEST FORM OF POLITICAL TREASON."

Again, the platform which Mr. Walsh wrote and which the Democratic party has adopted recommends a law which forbids a man from having the Democratic nomination who does not agree to support the Democratic platform.

Do those who intended to vote for Mr. Walsh for Governor wish to burden him with Representatives who cannot be relied upon to support Mr. Walsh's platform?

Do the Democratic voters want to associate with Mr. Walsh at the State House a lot of unreliable creatures who will desert him at the first crisis when the railroad lobby cracks the whip?

The AMERICAN publishes the names of the men who violated their party platform last year and who HAVE DODGED THE QUESTION whether they would be faithful to the Democratic platform this year. These men ought to be defeated by Democratic voters, for this treachery will weaken Mr. Walsh's administration next year.

The names of these men are:

James F. Barry, Second Hampden, Agawam.
Vincent Brogna, Sixth Suffolk, Boston.
Morton H. Burdick, Third Berkshire, Adams.
Daniel J. Chapman, Sixteenth Suffolk, Boston.
John L. Donovan, Seventh Suffolk, Boston.
Arthur G. Greaney, Ninth Hampden, Holyoke.
John C. Mahoney, Fifteenth Worcester, Worcester.
Leo F. McCullough, Thirteenth Suffolk, Boston.
John Mitchell, Fourth Hampden, Springfield.
Patrick E. Murray, Jr., Eighteenth Suffolk, Boston.
Robert Robinson, Eighth Suffolk, Boston.
John Ennis, Fourth Berkshire, Williamstown.
Dennis A. Murphy, Fifteenth Middlesex, Lowell.
Edward M. Hall, Fifth Berkshire, Pittsfield.
Michael Kelly, Nineteenth Essex, Salem.
Peter F. Tague, Third Suffolk, Boston.
William P. Hickey, Sixth Suffolk, Boston.
James P. Timilty, Seventh Suffolk, Boston.

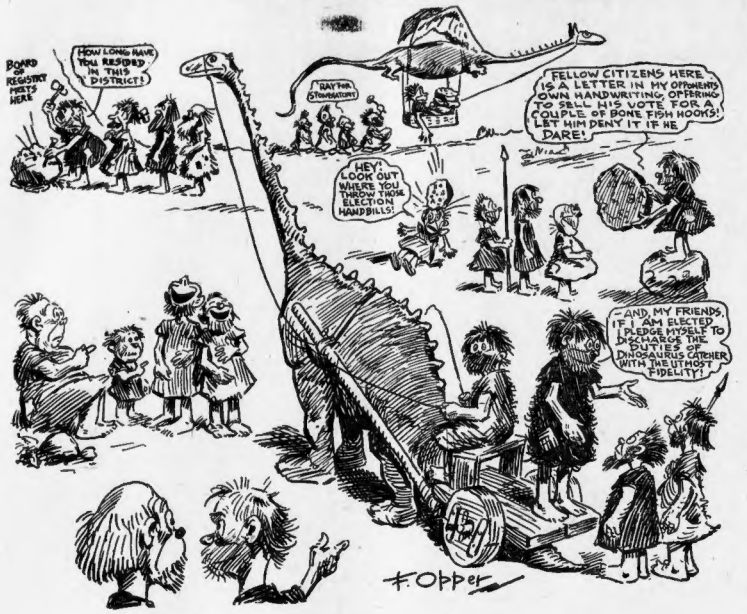

It Is the Part of Wisdom to Re-elect Mr. Pelletier

The citizens of Suffolk County ought to give some heed to the contest for District Attorney.

Mr. Pelletier has held the office for three years, has passed on more than twenty-five thousand cases; has shown discriminating mercy toward the little offenders, the victims of social misfortune and environment. It would be wiser to re-elect him than take a chance on an untried man.

LETTERS FROM READERS OF THE AMERICAN

A TRIBUTE TO MR. HEARST FROM WENDELL PHILLIPS THORE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

At my meeting with Congressman Gardner at Faneuil Hall it was my intention to give credit where credit is due and to pay a tribute to William Randolph Hearst for his splendid efforts in behalf of every American in the cause of civic righteousness. I inadvertently omitted what I intended to say because of the peculiar and complex situations attendant which would, indeed, have been confusing to any man. I have notwithstanding publicly paid this tribute to Mr. Hearst:

I desire to say without equivocation that the greater part of the credit for the nation-wide movement for civic righteousness should be given to William Randolph Hearst.

When today has passed into history and prejudice has given place to reason, the wonderful and ceaseless efforts of Mr. Hearst are bound to stand forth as an exemplification of a patriotic American's devotion to his country. In this I do not except Theodore Roosevelt.

Consider for a moment Mr. Hearst's great battle against the greatest predatory wealth corporation known to history—the Standard Oil Company. No other power could have interfered so successfully with the peculiar anarchy of this corporation's activity, when their "oily checks" were used to influence our government for their special interest.

I point to this as only one instance of the many courageous and fearless acts of the man. True, he has had the opportunity, but he has never faltered in using it for the benefit of the great masses of our people at the opportune moment.

We seem to have forgotten his valuable services when we take up more spectacular heroes of the day; but I say again that when tributes are laid upon the altar of civic righteousness in days to come, the efforts and deeds of William Randolph Hearst will not be forgotten, and there will be laid upon that altar in his memory a tribute that will not be less in glory than he deserves, but commensurate with that which he has given with full heart and soul to his country. The nation will then have answered that Truth has supplanted error.

Very sincerely yours,
WENDELL PHILLIPS THORE.
Boston, October 29.

Commendation from the Assistant Superintendent of Schools.

THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE OF THE CITY OF BOSTON.
Office of the Board of Superintendents, Mason Street.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Allow me to commend an article which appeared in the Sunday AMERICAN under date of September 21, 1913, entitled Concrete Books for Hub Schools. I have been interviewed from time to time, but rarely have I had a person who reproduced faithfully what I had to give him. Your reporter caught what little I had to say on the subject and, as a result, the article was graphic, faithful and illuminating. I have heard the article referred to time and time again, by the teachers in the schools and also by parents.

Very truly yours,
A. L. BAFTER,
Assistant Superintendent.

No One Need Fear Mr. Walsh Will Be Slave to Any Machine

The charge that Mr. Walsh will be dominated by the Boston machine and by Mayor Fitzgerald and Mr. Lomasney, ought not to excite much fear.

The Boston machine is a very nebulous affair. If anybody undertook to fight it, he would have as hard a task as the child who tried to find the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow. Whoever cherishes a lingering doubt concerning the non-existence of this machine, ought to inquire of the Federal officials at Washington who have the distribution of patronage in Massachusetts. Such an inquiry would provoke a smile in Washington. They know there that there is no harmony and no co-operation between any of those who might be considered parts of the political machine in Massachusetts. Everybody is pulling a different way.

It is the recent custom to hold up Mayor Fitzgerald as a bugbear in some small quarters. Just why it is thought the proper thing to do, the AMERICAN cannot understand. Mr. Fitzgerald has made an excellent Mayor of Boston. His energy and optimism have revived the energy and optimism of our community, and he may truly be called the outrider of our commercial revival.

But even if a powerful, well-oiled, smooth-running political machine DID exist in Boston and even if Mayor Fitzgerald were the menace of our welfare, as many who know nothing about him affect to believe, yet all the evidence tends to show that Mr. Walsh would not be dominated either by the machine or Mayor Fitzgerald. He has few, if any, Boston connections. He lives in Clinton. He practices law in Fitchburg. His business and social ties are in the middle and western parts of the State. Anybody who knows anything at all about Democratic politics, knows that the country has always fought the city Democracy.

For five years the country Democracy kept George Fred Williams in power as the Democratic leader because he was fighting the Boston machine. Last year Mr. Williams refused to accept the nomination for the National Convention on a slate which he suspected, wrongly was made by Boston Democrats. Yet Mr. Williams has absolute confidence in the independence of Mr. Walsh. During Mr. Walsh's participation in the councils of the party, everybody who is acquainted with the inside facts, knows that Mr. Walsh has taken his natural position with the up-State Democracy.

Those who know the REAL story will smile at the charge that Mr. Walsh will be dominated by Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Lomasney. Let it be remembered also that the Republicans raised the same cry against Governor Foss and cartooned him under the thumb of Mayor Fitzgerald.

A Big Part of the World's Work

By REV. C. F. AKED, D. D.

In the October issue of that very fine review, "The World's Work," there is an article entitled "The Business of Christianising the World." The article is in itself remarkable, but the really striking thing is that it appears, not in a missionary magazine, but in "The World's Work." One needs a minute or two in which to take in some of the implications of this fact. But there is no escaping the conclusion. The business of Christianizing the nations of the earth is now a part of the world's work! It is not a fad. It is not an amiable weakness on the part of gushing simpletons. It is not a diversion for the idle leisure of maiden ladies of a certain age with more money than sense. It is not even a legitimate outlet for Christian enthusiasm too exalted for this work-a-day life of ours. In the judgment of sober magazine editors and publishers who are not in the editing and publishing business "for their health," missionary enterprise is a substantial part of the world's work.

* * *

Times have changed since the best that Charles Dickens could do to help on the "business of Christianizing the world" was to represent Mrs. Jellyby, "who carried the world in her eye," as intent upon supplying flannel petticoats to the Hottentots and moral pocket handkerchiefs to the native populace of Borrioboola-Gha!

One wonders what Dickens would have said of a "business" whose success enables this "World's Work" writer to report that it was a missionary who first explored Africa and gave the first impetus toward the development and enlightenment of that great dark continent. A missionary made the first complete ascent of Mount Mc-Kinley. An American missionary manufactured the first set of movable types for the Chinese, thereby making possible the development of the Chinese newspaper. The jinrikisha comes from the inventive genius of another. More than twenty-five years ago the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions was able to fill a large book of five hundred pages with a record of the contributions of missionaries to science.

* * *

When Tennyson published his "Locksley Hall Sixty Years After" a literal-minded person fastened upon one descriptive line, "There the smouldering fire of fever creeps across the rotted floor," and demanded that Lord Tennyson give him the address, for he was quite certain that the medical missionary would soon go creeping after it! He was right!

It is impossible to give the number of hospitals at present maintained by the "business of Christianizing the world." The "World's Work" writer says, safely, "more than a thousand." And there are thousands of physicians and surgeons, men and women, engaged in this part of the "business." Dr. Sun Yat Sen received his first training in a missionary hospital. And he is only one of many now prominent in their own countries whose education was begun under similar conditions.

William Carey, first in the history of Protestantism, went out to India to begin his work. At that time there were about two hundred millions of Christians in the world. There are five hundred millions now. At the end of the eighteenth century the population of the world was about one thousand millions. It is now supposed to amount to fifteen hundred millions. That is to say, that while the population of the world has increased by 50 per cent., the Christian population has increased by 150 per cent. This is what is meant by the "business of Christianizing the world."

* * *

The genius of Kipling has analyzed for us the emotions of a native who sees for the first time an automobile somewhere on the road beyond the Simla Hills. Dr. Patton, just back from India, writes enthusiastically of the utilization of the automobile—"the epitome of modern civilization." He pictures for us Dr. Kate Scudder, out in Southern India: "A finer sight can hardly be imagined than Dr. Scudder returning from one of her medical trips, her touring car, fitted up as a dispensary, loaded down with the garlands of grateful patients she has ministered to along the road. They meet her at designated points, as at a bridge, or under a large tree and it is an unusual day when she has not treated one hundred such cases and brought back several patients to her excellent hospital at Vellore." And, to go back to the writer in "The World's Work": "In 1900 there was tragic testimony to the success of foreign missionary work in China, for during the Boxer outrages more than thirty thousand Christian converts chose to be killed rather than deny their faith."

* * *

San Francisco, or the religious part of it, is to take a hand in this business of Christianizing the world in 1915. It is probable that a great building, approved by the exposition management, will be erected on the fair grounds by the Christian organizations of the country. Here will be arranged exhibits, showing in massive proportions and splendid detail the progress of this great "business."
